Harry W. Lewis, Post 67, G. A. R., 6th U. S. Cavalry, U. S. Collector, Erie, Pa.

From Nelson's History of Erie County, Pa.

Harry W. Lewis, Erie, Pa., was born in Harbor Creek, Erie co., Pa., Aug. 30, 1810, and is a son of Marcus and Lucy (Allen) Lewis, the former a native of Vt., and of Revolutionary stock; the latter a native of New York and a grand niece of Col. Ethan Allen. Was the eighth in a family of twelve children. Was fifteen when family removed to Fairview, Pa. May 21

1861, he enlisted in a three months regiment. July 29, 1861, he enlisted under the late Gen. Jno. Irvin Gregg, then captain of Co. G. Sixth U. S. regular cavalry. Sept., 1861, he was made first duty sgt. April, 1863, was promoted to first sgt., and often had command of his company. At the battle of Gettysburg was taken prisoner, was at Belle Isle and Libby prisons, later paroled and exchanged. Was put in command of a detachment of U. S. Cavalry at Washington, D. C., and ordered to report to Gen.

Meade at the front, where he served under Gen. Sheridan. As a soldier Mr. Lewis has a record equaled by few. He participated in nearly all the battles of the Army of the Potomac. Was in over one hundred engagements in all, serving under Gens. Cook, Stoneman, Pleasanton, Buford and Merritt. May, 1862, was in charge of the first skirmish line to reach the vicinity of Bottom Bridge on the Chickahominy, also a detachment destroying bridges and blockading roads towards Hanover Court House, Va.: receiving first attack of Confederates on that road at the beginning of the seven days fight before Richmond, Va., in June, 1862. Also commanded extreme rear when Gen. Stoneman fell back on Whitehouse Landing and was almost continuously in the saddle for three days and nights, tiring out a number of mounts and details. Covered rear on falling back from Malvern Hill, and the evacuation of Harrison's Landing, being in charge of the last squad to recross the Chickahominy in Aug. 18, 1862. At Beverly Ford, Va., June 9, 1863, (Lient. Ward being killed) sgt. Lewis commanded fifth squadron, covered right of Gen. Buford's brigade, losing over one-half of the command. Also at Goose Creek and Upperville, Va., June 21, losing nine men. Just before the battle of Gettysburg by order of Gen. Merritt, Lient. Paulding crossed South Mountains, Md., sending sgt. Lewis with twenty men across the valley towards Hagerstown twenty miles away. He entered Hagerstown with eight men at dusk, capturing three confederates, driving a hoard of stragglers out. A cavalry brigade, Gen. Lee's rear guard, was encamped on three sides of the town at the time. Sgt. Lewis participated in a great many raids into the enemy's country. He always came out of a fight unharmed while others were killed: was once hit by a spent ball and many times having his ears tickled by zipping bullets and brow fanned by rushing shot and shells. Would have received the next commission had he reenlisted. Three of his brothers were in the service.

After over three years service sgt. Lewis received an honorable discharge returning to Erie County, engaged in farming. He was postmaster at Swanville four years. In 1881 he received the appointment of Custom House inspector and removed to Erie, Pa. July 1, 1889, he was appointed a mail carrier at Erie, Pa. Mr. Lewis is a member of the M. E. church, served as Sunday School Supt. and on the official board many years. Was a school director six years, five years as its president or secretary. Has filled many town offices. Politically a Republican, having served a number of times as return delegate and county committeeman. One trait in Mr. Lewis is, he never has asked any one to nominate or vote for him to any elective office, either politically, socially or religiously. He believes in the utmost freedom politically and religiously; that freedom only gives a person the right to do right. Was officer of the day eleven years continuously of his G. A. R. Post, also a member of the Royal Arcanum. Married June 10, 1865, Susan, daughter of Samuel and Mary M. (Heiss) Myers of Fairview. Mrs. Lewis died June 14, 1898. Six children born, five daughters and one son.

Head Quarters 2d Brig. 2d Div. }
C. C. Army of the Potomac, }
July 17, 1864. }

During the time I was in command of the company to which sgt. Lewis belongs, he was prompt in the performance of all duties. In action he was cool and collected, and I take great pleasure in bearing testimony to his efficiency and worth.

J. IRVIN GREGG,

Brig. General,
Com'g. Brigade.

The sixth U. S. Cavalry regulars ordered by President Lincoln in May, 1861, was organized in Aug., 1861. Twelve hundred and forty-five men in all. From 1861 to 1865 it passed through 57 battles as a regiment. Furnished 21 Brig. and Major Gens. of volunteers, several colonels and many staff officers. Often companies were commanded by sergeants. At one time only three commissioned officers were serving with the regiment. Later it furnished many Generals for the U. S. Army. Five are in the service now, Maj. Gen. Wade, Brig. Gens. Chaffee, Carpenter, Wood and White-side, all except Wade were enlisted men. The regiment lost nearly seven hundred men. Regular officers receive leave of absence to serve with volunteers.

CLARA MORRIS' RECOLLECTIONS OF THE STAGE AND ITS PEOPLE.

It was on a very hot September morning in 1870, that the company was called together in the green room of the Fifth Avenue Theater (v p 35 Vol. XI). . . . Every one gazed at me openly now, as if I were a conundrum, and they were trying to guess me. I honestly believe I should have broken down under the strain in a moment more, but fortunately a slender little man made his silent appearance at one of the doors, and took off his immaculate silk hat, revealing the thin blond hair, the big, pale blue pop-eyes of James Lewis (v p 136 Vol. XI). I expected no greeting now even from a former friend. He shook hands all round, glanced at me, and passed by, then looked back, came back, and held out his hand saying: "You stuck-up little brute. I knew you in aprons and pig-tails, and now you ain't going to speak to me. How are you, Clara?"

Just one person in the theatre knew that I was really a good actress, of considerable experience, and that was James Lewis; and from a tricky spirit of mischief he kept the silence of a graven image, and when Mr. Dan Hardkins took me aside to teach me to act, Lewis would retire to a quiet spot and writhe with suppressed laughter.

One day he said to me: "Say, you ain't cooking up a huge joke on these gas-balloons, are you, Clara? And upon my soul you are doing it well, you act as green as a cucumber."

And never did I succeed in convincing him that I had not engineered a great joke on the company by deceptive rehearsing. . . . It was the first friendly advance made to me. Before rehearsal ended I overheard the young man with the bald head saying: "She has sold us all, and I bet she will completely change the map of the Fifth Avenue Theatre."

"Oh, no, she won't," answered Lewis shortly. "She's not that type of woman." [This article has a portrait of James Lewis.—ED.]

American Heroes.

FROM THE NEW ENGLAND MAGAZINE.

What follows is the true record of heroic conduct performed in the face of death on the U. S. gunboat Petrel, as she lay off Cavite, in Manila Bay, on the last day of last March. . . . At 7 A. M. this listlessness disappeared as if by magic when the cry of "fire" was suddenly shouted and the alarm bell resounded through the ship. . . . Naval Cadet J. E. Lewis sprang rapidly on deck to overlook the intake of the pumps....at this moment there came running down from the upper deck Naval Cadet Lewis—"a youngster of twenty-two"—who had not even completed his final examinations and was on his preliminary two years' cruise. He heard the Commander's words and took in the situation at a glance. He stepped in front of the Commander.

"Captain," he cried, "let me go, I am younger and better able!"

And then without waiting for a reply he slid down the ladder and disappeared in the smoke. Commander Roper followed him immediately....

But where were Commander Roper and Cadet Lewis? They had now been in the deadly hold a long time, comparatively speaking, yet when Lieutenant McKean inquiringly looked at his men, there was hesitation plainly expressed in their attitude. He could not blame them. They had seen their comrades, big healthy fellows, who had fear of no visible enemy, knocked over with a suddenness that from the very invisibility of the cause would have been terrifying even to well educated men. It was no time now to explain to Jack the physical phenomena of gases. On the other hand, had they been ordered into the pit, every man of them would have run down the ladder, although sure that death laid in wait on the bottom rung. Officers go first in such cases.What the Lieutenant found there must be told briefly in his own modest words. "I could now see plainly through the smoke. There on one side near the further end of the room was Commander Roper in a sitting position, his back against the bulkhead, his head dropped over on his shoulder. There on the other side of the room in the same position sat Cadet Lewis. Commander Roper did not move, but I could see the breast of Cadet Lewis go slowly in and out. He was ex-dently fighting for his last breath. I walked toward them, and though it was only a few steps, and I do not believe I hesitated an instant, yet in the interval I had to make one of the hardest decisions of my life.

"I had made up my mind instantly that Commander Roper was dead. On the other hand, there was the Cadet alive yet, but almost at his last gasp; another minute and he, too, would be dead. Which should I take out first? I remember thinking of his youth, his chances of success, of what he might do if I saved him, but then there arose in my mind the old navy formula, R. H. I. P.—rank has its privileges—and Commander Roper was taken up first... Then I went for Lewis, but when they jerked the rope the first time my wet handkerchief had been dropped from my mouth and I had swallowed much of the gas, so when I had lifted his 140 pounds over to the ladder he was the heaviest burden I ever lifted in my life...it took three and four men to hold down each of the gas-infected sufferers. Many of them certainly would have gone overboard were it not for the powerful restraint put upon them. Cadet Lewis, for instance, owes his life to Assistant Paymaster D. M. Addison, whose coolness and judgment brought back life to the brave young Cadet and then helped to keep that life from destroying itself."—[This article has a picture of Naval Cadet Lewis.] Ed.]

Naval Awards of Honor.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—The Naval Board of Awards in its report to Secretary Long speaks in the highest terms of the self-sacrificing heroism of certain officers and men of the Petrel. Naval Cadet J. E. Lewis and others the board suggests, deserve medals and gratinities for their acts of self-devotion.

A. B. Lewis.

A. B. Lewis, president of the Majestic, Imperial and Royal Copper Mining companies of Beaver county, is just 41 years old. He was born in 1857 in Milan, O., and at the age of 13 years came West with his parents, his father being one of the pioneers of the state of Nebraska. After living some years in the central part of the state Mr. Lewis went to the Ohio Wesleyan College, where his education was acquired. On leaving college he came West again, passing through Nebraska and settling for a time in Wyoming. Then he went over into Colorado, where he engaged in mining. In 1896 Mr. Lewis, hearing of the copper possibilities of Beaver county, went down there. He saw that there were great possibilities for the country, but when he tried to interest others in it he was laughed at. This was specially true of Salt Lake talent. Mr. Lewis was told that he was wasting his time trying to do anything with the Beaver county prospects, but he finally succeeded in securing the co-operation of a few Eastern men and went ahead with his work.

Claim after claim was quietly gathered in and the three big companies were formed. Now, after five years of labor, Mr. Lewis is able to smile at those who derided him in his earlier efforts. The ten-car shipment of 40 per cent. copper ore from the O. K. claim of the Majestic group has silenced the skeptics.

Mr. Lewis lays no claim to being the discoverer of Beaver county. On the other hand, he says that a number of able miners were there ahead of him and that they recognized its possibilities. Through lack of capital or perseverance, however, they allowed their interest to flag and it may be said of Mr. Lewis at least, that he was the first man to make the mining world wake to the possibilities of his properties.—From the Salt Lake City Herald.

THE NEXT STRUGGLE IN CHINA.

BY ROBERT E. LEWIS, M. A.

Mr. Robert E. Lewis graduated from the University of Vermont in 1892. In 1898 he was appointed secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in China and charged with the responsibility of furthering that organization's ends throughout the empire. He resides in Shanghai and is in intimate touch with the reform party among the Chinese, and has intimate sources of information such as few Americans have.

Seating ourselves on opposite sides of a square table, the Mandarin and I sipped tea until the attendants had withdrawn, and then launched out into the subject of the interview. I was talking with an alert, splendidly groomed man, whose English had none of the brogue which betrays a German or a Frenchman, but which seldom trips up a well educated Chinese. This man belonged to the gwan (official residence) of a guardian of the heir apparent, a gwan famous for its sympathy with modern education and commerce. During the interview he repeatedly said that he was speaking not only his own mind, but also the mind of progressive officials generally.

I recognize that many of my readers will be tempted to taboo this discussion as probably originating in bigoted sectarianism. But I call attention to the additional fact that in my travels in all parts of China, and in interviews with over a thousand missionaries, I have found this religious-legal question to be one of constant and increasing proportions.

GENEALOGICAL RECORDS.

Explanations, Abbreviations, etc.

For convenience the records of the various Lewis families are divided into Books and each Book into chapters. At the head of each Book appears the name of the earliest known ancestor of that family. The List of Books is a complete index to the Books as published to this time. New Books will be added from time to time as new branches of the Lewis family are found. As soon as Books are proved parts of others they will be merged into the Books to which they belong. Each name is numbered when first printed and whenever the name is repeated this number follows in brackets. The abbreviations commonly used in genealogical work are used, as b. for born; d. died; m. married; m. (1) first wife; dau. daughter; unm. not married; v. p. see page; etc.

DR. EMILY ALICE HILL.

Dr. Emily Alice Hill was born in Lucas Co., O., July 30, 1857, died in Bowling Green, O., Feb. 6, 1902. Her childhood was spent on a farm near Toledo, where she received a good common school education. She took a further course of study in the Maumee High school, after which she taught for four years. Having been brought up in a christian home she early sought and found that perfect peace which passeth all understanding; and thus she delighted to lead the youthful minds which came into her care, into a higher and nobler life.
But owing to the physical confinement of the position, she was obliged to give up the vocation of teaching and through the suggestion of Dr. Gavitt, a lady physician of Toledo, she decided to take up the medical profession.
She entered the medical department of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and was graduated in 1886. In 1887 she located in Bowling Green, O., where she has since very successfully practiced until her death. Words cannot express the most noble characteristics of this estimable lady and a very large assembly of people filled the M. E. church of Bowling Green to pay the last respect to the departed one. A lengthy tribute is given in the Bowling Green Evening Tribune of Feb. 8. Miss Hill was the daughter of James Willison and Zenira M. (Lewis) Hill. Her father died many years ago but her mother still survives her. Miss Hill was a granddaughter of Ephraim (3195).

HERE AND THERE IN THE FAMILY.

A recent issue of the Royal Arcanum Bulletin mentions among the notable members of Evansville Council No. 491, R. A., Dr. Stephen B. Lewis (2781 v p 117 Vol. VII) the dentist of Evansville, Ind. He was a charter member of the council (organized in May, 1880), Past Regent, Grand Regent of the state in 1892 and Supreme Representative in 1892 and 1893. Dr. Lewis is also a Mason, Knight Templar, Past Eminent Commander, Past Master, Blue Lodge and Past High Priest of the Chapter.

Connecticut Pensions: April 9, 1902, original widows to Jennie A. Lewis of Plainfield, $6 per month [v George W. (460) p 126 Vol. III.—ED.]

Died—In Boston, Mass., July 23, 1901. Major James F. Lewis (1748 v p 69 Vol. V) in the 61st year of his age. Funeral at Meriden, Conn.

Major Lewis was born May 26, 1840, at Blandford, Mass. He served in the Union army during the Civil War and in 1869 entered the service of the New York, Oswego and Midland Railroad Company. In 1892 he removed to Chicago, becoming the western manager of the Rand-Drill Company, and remained here until 1898, when he removed to Sherbrooke, Canada. He was a member of various engineering societies, including the Technical Club of Chicago.

CHAPTER CLXVI.

FROM HIST. OF AM. FUR TRADE.

On the 14th of May, Lewis and Clark set out on their long and perilous expedition. This celebrated performance stands as incomparably the most perfect achievement of its kind in the history of the world. The expedition reached the Pacific Ocean Nov. 16, 1805, set out on the return journey
Mar. 23, 1806, and arrived in St. Louis Sept. 23, 1806. The journey was accomplished with the loss of only one man, who died from causes apparently in no way connected with the expedition.
The information gathered was so exhaustive and correct that Lewis and Clark continued to be the standard authority on the region traversed by the expedition for fully forty years thereafter.

CHAPTER CLXVII.

FROM THE N. Y. EVENING POST.

"Lewis and Clark" is certainly in the air, as we can now announce the third reprint (second from the edition of 1844) contemplated this year. It will initiate the "Commonwealth Library," projected by the New Amsterdam Book Company to "preserve in popular form a wealth of valuable history of early American exploration"

CHAPTER CLXVIII.

Maj. E. C. Lewis (v p 118 Vol. XII)
the general manager of the Tennessee Exposition (v p 82 Vol. VIII) has informed the officials of the Louisiana

Purchase Exposition that "It is probable that the monument erected to Meriwether Lewis, famous as the first Governor of the Louisiana Purchase and as connected with the Lewis & Clark expedition, will be exhibited at the Fair or reproduced. The Tennessee Society of St. Louis is greatly interested in this project."

CHAPTER CLXIX.

The holiday (Jany. 1st) number of the Portland Morning Oregonian, an illustrated issue of 64 pages gives much space to Lewis and Clark and singularly enough labels Clark's portrait as Capt. Meriwether Lewis. Between the Exposition at St. Louis in 1903 and that at Portland in 1905 it is to be hoped that not only the name (v. p 110 Vol. XII) but the face (v. p 185 Vol. XI) also of Capt. Meriwether Lewis may become familiar to every school boy of our land. By courtesy of Chas. Scribner's Sons, publishers of First Across the Continent, their reproduction from the original painting in Independence Hall, Philadelphia appeared in last December's issue.

The whole first page is devoted to the Effect of the Lewis and Clark Expedition upon the Westward Expansion of the U. S. The Story of the Great Journey is on the second page with a picture of the site of Fort Clatsop, where Lewis and Clark passed the winter of 1805-6. On another page is given Lewis and Clark's Itinerary, Tabulated, and also the picture of the gt. gr. dau. (now living in Clackamas co.) of the "Bird Woman" who filled such an important part in the expedition. Elsewhere appear descriptions of Lewis co., Wash., famous for its lumber and mines, and of Lewiston, Ida., "the commercial and social center of one of the richest portions of Uncle Sam's domain," both of which were named in honor of the famous explorer.

Among the many illustrations of buildings at Portland we notice the large corner building occupied by Allen & Lewis, Wholesale Grocers, who state "Portland is a jobbing center to-day for largely the same reasons that existed when the late C. H. Lewis selected for this business this city, as a location that presented greater natural advantages than any other deep-water point in the Northwest."

CHAPTER CLXX.

FROM THE NASHVILLE AMERICAN.

(REPORT OF COMMITTEE CONCLUDED.)

"The impression has long prevailed that under the influence of the disease of body and mind—of hopes based upon long and valuable services—not merely deferred, but wholly disappointed—Gov. Lewis perished by his own hands. It seems to be more probable that he died by the hands of an assassin. The place at which he was killed is even yet a lovely spot. It was then wild and solitary, and on the borders of the Indian nation. Maj. M. L. Clark, a son of Gov. Clark, of Missouri, in a letter to Rev. Mr. Cressey, of Maury County, says: "Have you ever heard of the report that Gov. Lewis did not destroy his own life, but was murdered by his servant, a Frenchman, who stole his money and horses, returned to Natchez, and was never afterwards heard of? This is an important matter in connection with the erection of a monument to his memory, as it clearly removes from my mind at least the only stigma upon the fair name I have the honor to bear.

"The undersigned would suggest to the General Assembly the propriety of having an acre of ground, or some other reasonable quantity, around the grave secured against the entry of private persons. This can be done, either by reserving the title in estate or by directing a grant to issue in the name of the Governor and his successors in office. The first mode would perhaps be the best."

A PENNSYLVANIA CLIPPING.

LEWIS FAMILY REUNION.

On the last day of August 1894, the children of James and Betsey Lewis, (deceased) namely Sheperd, Justus and Lester Lewis, Clarissa Shelp, Mary Beaumont, and Huldah Whitney, with their companions (save two who have recently died) their children, and families, to the number of thirty-six, met at the home of Lester Lewis, on Fair Hill, Susq. County, Pa. Only one brother Wilbur Lewis of Nebraska was absent. Mrs. Russell Hoadly, aged 78 (a sister of Betsey Lewis,) and her husband aged 84, were among the number present. The members of the family are widely scattered, some living in Michigan, and York State, and in Bradford and Susquehanna Counties, Pa. Some meeting for the first time in about twenty years, Mr. Lyons came from Montrose and photographed the group just as the sun was setting, a fit emblem of the older part of the family, who trusting in God, expect soon to rest in the arms of the Saviour. The next day Sept. 1st, the brothers and sisters, with some of their children, to the number of 22, met at the home of Mrs. John Shelp, in Fairdale, and after a pleasant visit, finished the day with prayer and Conference meeting; in which all except two of the youngest children, offered prayer, and testified to their love for Christ; and joined in singing praises to Him. Thus fittingly closed a very pleasant reunion of relatives, and we trust we may live to meet thus many times on earth, and finally meet in Heaven. ONE THAT WAS THERE.

CHAPTER XXXII.

BY CELIA LEWIS DABOLL, CENTER GROTON, CONN.

This obituary of Celia (90 v p 43 Vol. VII) may be useful to some one tracing the "educators" among the Lewises.

DEATH OF A SCHOOL TEACHER.

Miss Celia J. Lewis Associate Principal of the Point Street Grammar School, died at Providence, R. I., Oct. 17, 1875, Sunday night of typhoid pneumonia. The friends of our public schools, especially those where she has for several years been a teacher, will deplore her loss.

She was a native of this city, was educated in its schools, and has been a teacher about twenty years, and Assistant Principal some ten years, having been assigned to that position when connected with the Elm Street Grammar School. She was eminently conscientious and had a love for teaching, which made her success assured. She had a personal magnetism which seized hold of her pupils and gave her power to exercise a discipline not based on force, and stimulate her pupils by arousing in them a love of study for its own sake.

Too much praise cannot be said of her as a Christian woman most faithfully devoted to her work as a teacher, laboring not only to cultivate the mind and intellect, but ever directing the footsteps of the young into paths of virtue and nobleness, and urging them to live spotless lives by an example worthy of the purest womanhood, as well as by precept.

As an efficient teacher she stood in the first rank, and her mode of discipline being in the spirit of love, gentle and kind, she touched the hearts of the children whereby they were led almost unconsciously into the path of right.

She was also a faithful Sabbath School teacher and her influence there will continue to bear fruit in after years.

In short she was a woman of nobleness of character and lived up to the fullness of the lines she loved and cherished:—

"Do noble things, not dream them all day long:

And so make life, death and that vast forever

One grand, sweet song."

At the age of 19 years he enlisted in the Continental army and served 5½ years. He was taken prisoner on Long Island and was a prisoner about 1½ years in New York. He was treated very badly, starved and in cold weather nearly frozen, no fire being provided to keep the prisoners warm.

He had a brother (4) who was also a prisoner, who could not stand the treatment and died in prison. He served most of his time on the shores of the Hudson river. He was exchanged soon after Gen. Burgoyne's surrender in 1777. He was on sentry duty at the house where Gen. Washington had his headquarters the night before Major Andre was hung.

He was present at the hanging of Andre.

He stated that Gen. Washington never saw Major Andre. After the war was over he returned to Westfield, where he married Experience Rice and they had 4 or 5 children, then removed with his family to Poughkeepsie, Vt., where several others were born.

Nelson P. Lewis, who has been chief engineer in the Department of Highways in Brooklyn for several years, has been appointed an engineer of the Board of Estimate at a salary of $7,500. He graduated from St. Stephen's College in 1875, and two years later from the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy. He has been employed as engineer in the City Works Department in Brooklyn since 1889.

He was formerly President of the Brooklyn Engineers' Club and is a member of the American Society of Municipal Improvement.

Warden Cyrus E. Lewis of Shelton, Ct., gave a reception and banquet at his home to members of the borough board and heads of departments. A delightful social time was enjoyed up to ten o'clock, when the dining-room doors were thrown open, and the company were invited to partake of a fine spread. The table decorations with their abundance of flowers, together with the fine china and cut glass presented a most attractive appearance. The menu printed on souvenir cards, bearing the portrait of Warden Lewis, with the motto "Fate Cannot Harm Me, I Have Dined To-day" at the bottom of the card, was very unique.

In the block bounded by Manhattan, East Houston, Lewis and East Third streets, New York City, piles are now being driven for the foundations of what will be the largest public school in the world. It will accommodate 3,915 children and every one of them will have a desk and a seat.

John B. Lewis, connected with one of the best families in Greenup co., Ky., is a character who can be described as unique, for, while now charged with murder, he has ranged through the walks of life from preacher to saloon keeper, with plenty of wild West cowboy experience sandwiched in to give both extremes spice.

Do you want, says Field and Stream, to put a dog in condition for a show and have him properly handled? Write to B. F. Lewis, Lansdowne, Pa. for particulars. He has had an experience of thirty years in this country and England.

As far as appearances go to the eye of a stranger Senator Higgins of Olean, represents the aristocratic, whereas Senator Lewis of Rochester, typifies the democratic, elements of the Senate (N. Y. State). At bottom both are plainspoken, affable, big hearted men, who view their fellows without regard to class or caste.

In the great fire at Waterbury, Ct., on the night of Feby. 2-3, 1902, the fine Lewis block was saved but the Scovill House built in 1849 was destroyed. About 1894 E. C. Lewis, who then owned the hotel spent nearly $40,000 in making the hotel rank with the best in Connecticut, and since then its management has met the expectations of the traveling public, and it has literally coined money.

The hotel was always Judge Lewis's pride, and it is well known his heirs were not much taken up with it as an investment. It was listed at $100,000, and it was considered one-twentieth of his holdings when he died several months ago. [d Oct. 24, 1901, ae 75. A new Book giving this line will be opened soon. Ed.] It may not be rebuilt.

Charles B. Lewis of Memphis believes he has discovered an embalming fluid the possibilities of which will pale the luster of that used by the ancient Egyptians. The fluid prepared by Mr. Lewis has been used in an experimental way by Memphis undertakers and at the Memphis Medical College for several weeks.

Mr. Lewis is a practical embalmer of many years' experience. He asserts that his discovery is superior to the embalming preparations used by the Egyptians, for while his infusion will preserve the subject for all time, humanly speaking, as did that of the ancients, it prevents the shrivelling up that was inseparable from Egyptian embalming and it does not call for the swaths and bandages in which all Egyptian mummies were encased.
