GENEALOGICAL RECORDS.

Explanations, Abbreviations, etc.

For convenience the records of the various Lewis families are divided into Books and each Book into chapters. At the head of each Book appears the name of the earliest known ancestor of that family. The List of Books is a complete index to the Books as published to this time. New Books will be added from time to time as new branches of the Lewis family are found. As soon as Books are proved parts of others they will be merged into the Books to which they belong. Each name is numbered when first printed and whenever the name is repeated this number follows in brackets. The abbreviations commonly used in genealogical work are used: as b. for born; d. died; m. married; m. (1) first wife; dau. daughter; unm; not married; v. p. see page, etc.

Hints for Contributors.

In writing matter for the printer use only one side of the sheet, note paper preferred. In giving dates, give year, month and day whenever known. Write all middle names in full. Give names and addresses of such people as you think may be able to complete the record but get it yourself if possible and spare the editor. Old newspaper files, tomb stones, family Bibles and records, official records of the town, school and church, burial certificates, county and probate records, old deeds and letters are some of the more important sources of information. Don't forget however the stores of information which the old people can give—Get them interested and then "pump them dry." Most important of all, don't get discouraged yourself. How can you interest others, if yourself are not alive with enthusiasm?

CHAPTER CCX.

FROM NEW HAVEN, CT., REGISTER.

Mary Lewis Ford, (1011 v p 7 Vol. IX) wife of General George H. Ford, daughter of the late Hon. John Calhoun Lewis, (427 v p 162 Vol VIII) speaker of the House of Representatives in 1849, and niece of the late Henry Gould Lewis, (v p 175 Vol. IV and p 149 Vol. V) for several years mayor of the city of New Haven, died suddenly at her residence, at about daybreak this morning, March 24, 1900.

For years a most popular and esteemed member of the community, well known, and with a large circle of acquaintances and friends, Mrs. Ford's death will be a great shock to many New Haven people. A few years ago she was attacked with an aggravating form of bronchitis and asthma, which has retired her for the past four years from the association of friends and acquaintances. The last season, however, she had somewhat recovered her strength and health and had occasionally appeared among her friends.

Mrs. Ford was well known in this city where she was engaged in numerous benevolent and hospitable activities. She was personally of the most charming manners and friendly disposition and her cordiality, honesty and frankness made her circle of friends very large. For many years Mrs. Ford was associated with many of the important charitable enterprises of the city. She was a manager of the New Haven Orphan Asylum and a prominent member of the Church of the Redeemer.

Mrs. Ford leaves beside her husband a brother, Mr. Thomas C. Lewis (1014 v p 150 Vol. VIII) of Woodbridge.

CHAPTER CCXIV.

A NEW YORK CLIPPING.

Judge John Livy Lewis (v p 149 Vol. X) was a member of the four subordinate Masonic bodies in Penn Yan, N. Y. and the presiding officer of each of them, besides holding many other positions in them of great importance and responsibility. It was, however, in his connection with the Grand Lodge and General Grand Chapters that his great reputation was made as a wise and accomplished Mason. The history of these bodies for many years is his history. It was through his firm and consistent course, tempered with kindness and courtesy, that the two great unions between contending grand lodges were brought about, and in effecting these results he won for himself the enviable character of peace-maker. He was thoroughly conversant with the history and principles of Free Masonry, and always prepared to interest and to instruct. As a Masonic writer his reputation was world wide, and while occupying the position of general grand high priest he was appealed to by companions upon the other side of the Atlantic for true Masonic light. He died full of years and honors. He had a national reputation in the Masonic fraternity and as Knight Templar.

Most Worshipful Brother John L. Lewis was grand master of the State of New York during the years 1856, 1857, 1858 and 1859. He served as grand high priest of the grand Chapter of this State in 1852, 1853 and 1854, and as general grand high priest of the General Grand Royal Arch Chapter of the United States of America for three years from 1865. He was elected generalissimo of the Grand Commandery of this State in 1857, and wrote the knightly burial service (in one day, it is said), which was afterward adopted by that grand body, and is now in general use throughout the United States. He labored earnestly for over thirty years in aiding the hall and asylum project, which was suggested in 1839 and resulted many years later in the erection of the Masonic Temple at the corner of Sixth avenue and Twenty-third street in New York at a cost $1,250,000, and the subsequent establishment of the Masonic Home in Utica.

Most Worshipful Brother Lewis was also sovereign grand commander of the Supreme Council of Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite for the northern jurisdiction of the United States in the year 1867, and in 1888, he was elected emeritus member of the southern jurisdiction of the same rite. Few Masons, living or dead, have contributed more in general usefulness to the cause of Masonry than Most Worshipful Master Brother John L. Lewis. His death marked the close of a modest but useful, well rounded and honored life. He now sleeps his last sleep in one of the most beautiful spots in Lake View Cemetery, made so by those who had held him in highest esteem. His great soul is now free from the humiliation of time. It has entered into that life which continues forever. Its powers and capabilities will expand and enlarge, assimilating more and more into likeness with that Being who gave it life. Those is consolation to be found in its aims clean and clear; pure in private paths and public ways; full of duties well performed and crowned with the honor which comes from a busy and useful life.

CHAPTER CCXV.

FROM BRISTOL, CONN., PRESS.

Luman Lewis, (1127 v p 150 Vol. IX) of Marion, who celebrated his 97th birthday March 1st, was born in 1803, (v p 14 Vol. IV). He cast his first vote for John Quincy Adams and has not since then missed a Presidential election. Thursday he was as spry as a cricket, showing no signs of breaking up. He retains all his faculties. His memory is of the best and many interesting anecdotes of years ago are recalled by him. Mr. Lewis by his trade of stone mason, leaves many monuments. All along the old Farmington canal, which was superseded by the Northampton railroad, are remains of the locks and bridges erected by him. Many of the mill pond dams for miles around he can recall as having worked on. A monument that has stood for many years is at Welton, N. C., in the Roanoke river in the shape of a railroad pier 65 feet high.

Mr. Lewis and his wife observed their golden wedding in 1876. Mrs. Lewis' death in 1883, is the only death in the family. Mr. Lewis bids fair to reach the age of 100 years. He is a well known member of the Old Mens'

Club that meets annually at Com-pounce.

CHAPTER CCXX.

FROM COMMERCIAL TRIBUNE, CINCIN-NATI, OHIO.

On Oct. 16, 1899, Mrs. Amelia Thomson of "Walnut Hills" celebrated her 100th birthday.

Mrs. Amelia Thomson was born
October 16, 1799, in the small settlement of Neely's Bend, a few miles from Nashville, on the Cumberland River.
Her direct ancestors on her father's side belonged to the Lewis family, of England, which sought refuge from persecution for a time in Holland, and then, with others, made their way to New England not long after the Mayflower landed her first settlers at Plymouth. These Lewises drifted

slowly to the westward, locating at Farmington, Conn., and it was from that old anchorage that her father emigrated to the great empire beyond the mountains and settled in Tennessee. Seth Lewis was her father's name. He studied law at Nashville in the office of Andrew Jackson, practising with him later and enjoying a lifelong intimacy with the Warrior-President. A rare combination of the restless pioneer, profound lawyer and ardent Methodist was Seth Lewis.

The little Amelia was in long clothes, not quite 2 years old, when her father decided to "move on." Like others of that day, he grew restless at the encroachments of civilization and saw the pot of gold at the end of the Western rainbow. Building one of the primeval river "arks," as they were called, Lawyer Lewis packed his family and household belongings upon it, floated down the Cumberland into the Ohio, down the Mississippi, and made a halt at Natchez, then into the heart of friendly Indian tribes. It was about this time, in 1803 to be exact, that President Jefferson bought the vast Louisiana Territory from Napoleon I. for $15,000,000, and one of his earliest acts under the new regime was to appoint Amelia's father the first United States Judge in the new American domain.

For some time Judge Lewis made his home at Natchez attending to the duties of his office, and the daughter—the fourth of twelve children, by the way—grew into girlhood with nature, ponies and Indians for her friends. She could ride like an Arab, and knew the long trails through the virgin forests as well as the ground about her home. Led by a restless spirit, coupled with a thirst for land ownership, her father, before many years, pulled up stakes again and moved, first to a plantation at Bayou Teche, La., and later to Opelousas, where he passed the remainder of his days.

CHAPTER CLXIII.

FROM SPRINGFIELD, MASS, REPUBLICAN.

Cynthia Conant (1153 v p 152 Vol. X) was the daughter of Jesse and Azubah Lewis, and was born in Centerville September 14, 1798. When she was still young the family moved to Hyannis, where she spent her girlhood. Her father at that time was a sea captain, but after the war of 1812 he gave up seafaring life and moved with his family into Boston. It was in that city that Miss Lewis met and married Benjamin Conant, a ship-chandler. After his death many years ago, Mrs. Conant went back to Hyannis to live and from there she moved to this city and lived on the Hill until 1889, when she again moved to her home on lower Union street, where she lived with her only daughter, Mrs. W. A. Norris, until the time of her death. She had been a member of the First Baptist church of Hyannis for 60 years, and had never relinquished her membership with that organization to join any of the churches of this city. She was the oldest of a family of 12 children, and her sister, Ellen M. Sprague, the youngest of the whole family, is the only one who survives her, and she is 79 years old. All of the Lewis family have lived to a ripe old age, her father being 96 when he died and her mother 86.

Mrs. Conant's memory before her last illness was indeed wonderful. As a girl she lived in Boston, and remembered distinctly seeing Gen. Lafayette when he made his famous visit to that city. It was a great pleasure to her to speak of this and she was wont to tell of the famous Frenchman and to describe him as a man of youthful appearance, handsome and graceful. She had also seen many of the early presidents when they visited Boston, and on several occasions had heard Daniel Webster speak. Of the war of 1812 she could tell many interesting stories. Her father, during that time, was one of a party who captured a British boat that was taken into the harbor of Hyannis and set on fire to prevent its capture by the Americans. Her father was among those who boarded the vessel, extinguished the fire, and commanded the boat in person when she was afterward towed to Boston harbor as a prize.

CHAPTER CXXII.

FROM CHILD LIFE IN COLONIAL DAYS.

Col. John Lewis (7 v p 9 Vol. VI) one of the old Virginia gentlemen, had two child wards. As befitted young gentleness of that day of opulence and extravagance, they had their dress from England. In 1736, when Robert Carter, the younger child, was about nine years old, suits of fine holland, laced, and of red worsted and of green German serge came across the seas for him, with laced hats with loops and buttons. When he was twelve years old part of his "winter clothes" were six pair of shoes and two of pumps, four pair of worked hose and four of thread hose, gloves, hats and shoe buckles. His sister Betty had a truly fashionable wardrobe, and the stiff, restrictive dress of the times was indicated by the items of stays, hoops, masks and fans.

When "Miss Custis" (v p 153 Vol. VIII) was but four years old George Washington ordered for her from England packthread stays, stiffened coats, a large number of gloves and masks. An order for purchases sent to a London agent by Washington in 1761 contains a full list of garments for both his step-children. "Miss Custis" was then six years old. These are some of the items:

- 1 Coat made of Fashionable Silk.
- A Fashionable Cap or fillet with Bib apron.
- Ruffles and Tuckers to be laced.
- 4 Fashionable Dresses to be made of Long Lawn.
- 2 Fine Cambrick Frocks.

CHAPTER LXXVII.

FROM HISTORY OF AUGUSTA CO., VA.

THE BATTLE OF POINT PLEASANT.

(concluded from p 139 Vol. X)

The calamity of our loss on that day was heightened by the death of Col. Charles Lewis, who abandoned himself too much to his passion for glory and forgot that there is a wide difference between an officer and a private. Instead of confining himself to giving orders, he sought to execute them also. Rushing headlong into the fray, a more than ordinarily conspicuous object by reason of a scarlet waistcoat which he wore, against the remonstrances of his friends, he fell early under the enemy's fire. Not inferior to his brother, the General, in courage, intrepidity and military genius, he surpassed him in some respects. He knew how to oblige with a better grace, how to win the hearts of those about him with a more engaging behavior. He, consequently, acquired the esteem and affection of his men in a remarkable manner. To perpetuate the memory of his public and private virtues, his eminent services in the field, and his heroic fate, the General Assembly of Virginia, in 1816, named Lewis county in his honor.

The battle was no sooner won and the Indians in flight than Gen. Lewis, with that enthusiasm which is peculiar to great minds, took steps to reap the fruits of victory. He ordered preparations for pursuit and, while these were progressing, had the wounded cared for, the dead buried, and himself laid off a rectangular stockade fort, eighty feet long, with block-houses at two of the corners. It was built for the protection of the sick and wounded. The next morning he crossed the Ohio with his fighting men and proceeded, though deep ravines and impenetrable thickets impeded his progress, by forced marches for the Pickaway Plains. The savages, who fled before him or hung upon his flanks, now regarded with admiration and terror his spirit and energy; and notwithstanding the losses of Lewis at the Battle of the Point, he appeared to them as more formidable and more powerful than ever. They saw the folly of opposing such a man and made up their minds to sue for peace. Thus this great soldier and wise man not only shaped the opinions and directed the conduct of his own men but those of his enemies.

FROM HIST. COLL. OF GWYNEDD

Among the very earliest settlers in Montgomery was Thomas Lewis (1) a native of Wales, who in 1701 bought 484 acres in the south corner of the township from Thomas Fairman, the Philadelphia surveyor, who had title for a large tract of Montgomery.

Thomas Lewis was, no doubt, a Friend. He d in the summer of 1723, leaving 280 acres of his farm to his son George (2), 150 acres to his son Richard (3) and 50 to a grandson Thomas (5).

"George (2) Lewis of Gwynedd, batchelor, and Jane Roberts, of the same tp. m at Gwynedd m h 9th mo. 3, 1708." Witnesses Thomas and Richard Lewis; John, Ellis, William and Evan Roberts and 43 others. He was a prominent member of Gwynedd meeting. The memorial of him by the monthly meeting says "he was a native of Wales, of a peaceable and inoffensive life and conversation. He was an elder 30 years, even to his death, which was on the 9th of 12th month, 1752, in the 72nd year of his age." 1 ch b.

Record of Life.

A GOLDEN WEDDING.

The unusual and happy event of the month was the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Darwin Warner of Salisbury, Conn. which pleasing event took place Saturday at high noon—50 years to the hour. Though the sun withheld its shining rays, the home presented a cheerful appearance, having been beautifully decorated by their niece, Miss Sharpe, with yellow chrysanthemums and laurel.

The bride and groom occupied seats under a large golden bell. Mrs. Warner was attired in a handsome black silk dress trimmed with golden colored lace and tie of same color. The venerable lady had lost none of her grace and looked very queenly. She did the honors with quiet dignity and with the harmonious surroundings formed a picture the guests will not soon forget. The groom wore the conventional black and seemed as cheerful and happy as when he led his bride to the altar fifty years ago.

A large number of out of town guests were present coming from New York, Troy, Waterbury, Washington and Great Barrington. Many letters and telegrams of congratulation were received, some coming from as great distances as Hawaii, London and California.

Dr. John G. Davenport Pastor of the 2nd Cong. Church of Waterbury though unable to be present wrote a loving greeting and poem as follows:

On the fourth day of April, 1852, the Second Congregational Church of Waterbury was organized with fifty members. Among the half hundred thus united in sacred bonds were Darwin Warner and his wife Maria Lewis Warner. Their names stand in the list as numbers "35" and "37."

He brought to the new organization a letter from the Congregational church in Birmingham, and she a certificate of membership in the Episcopal church in Salisbury. From that time until January 1, 1886 they remained in the fellowship of the Second church for nearly 34 years, sharing the prosperity and adversity, the disappointments and successes of that household of faith. They were always true to their trust, helpful according to their ability, encouraging and dear to their pastors. Illustrating in their daily life the virtues of the Christian character. Work for the poor and distressed always found in them sympathy and substantial aid. They were among those unassuming, devoted, responsive people that constitute the abiding strength of our churches. We of Waterbury were grieved when we learned that they were to leave us. We followed them with our interest and affection and have always been pleased to learn of their prosperity and peace.

We congratulate the bride and groom.

This anniversary day.

Upon the hour that radiant stands

Just fifty years away:

The hour that linked their hands in love

And bound their hearts together

And sent them forth to journey on

Through calm and stormy weather.

We wonder if the bride was dressed

In white or green or gray.

And how the youthful groom appeared

That memorable day;

And who it was that tied the knot

And made it so secure
That all the decades stress and strain
It safely should endure.

*** *** ***

And now as lovers still they stand,
More truly such to-day
For all the joy and grief they've shared
As years have rolled a way:
Heaven's golden light around them streams
Love human and divine,
And tenderest sympathies and hopes
Their aged hearts entwine.

And when the Master calls to leave
The precious earthly home,
'Twill be to find the mansion fair
Whence none would ever roam.
'Twill be to have the bond of earth
Renewed for years untold
By Him whose presence glorifies
The world where none grow old.

WHITE HOUSE WEDDINGS.

Two weddings took place at the White House while Jackson was president. First was that of Miss Mary Lewis, the daughter of Major Lewis, Gen. Jackson's intimate friend and companion in arms. Miss Lewis married M. Alphonse Joseph Yver Pageot, a native of Martinique, who was Secretary of the French Legation in this city in 1836 and 1840, and was Minister from France to this country from 1842 to 1848. The gossips said that Louis Philippe appointed him Minister that he might look after his wife's property in Tennessee. There are still some old Washingtonians who remember Mme. Pageot. She died over thirty years ago at Montpelier in France. She made a lovely bride, it is recalled, and President Jackson gave her away.—New York Sun.

HADDAM CT. SINCE THE REVOLUTION.

In the sketch of the First Congregational Church, written by the present pastor, Mr. Lewis, there is a charming description of the structure....In 1871, on the death of Mr. Wright, succeeded Mr. Everett E. Lewis, whose earnest endeavor for the welfare of the town has been through all these eight and twenty years as unflagging as it has been broad minded, thoughtful and devoted.—Connecticut Magazine.

DISEASE PREVENTION.

J. P. LEWIS, M. D. Topeka, Kan.
To prevent disease is the object of every honest, scientific physician of the world today. We, as physicians, are compelled to take things as we find them, and it falls to most of our lot to cure or assist nature in the effort to overthrow disease. We, as a class, are continually advising and teaching the people how to avoid any materies morbi that would bring disaster to the human economy. Though even with our boasted civilization, we have not made the progress that would seem we should.

Is it not high time now that we should drop the word "inherited?" Nothing is more certain than that no one does or can inherit consumption.

The way to avoid this is by not coming in contact with the tubercle bacillus in man or beast; by preventing expectoration in public places, and compel the use of sanitary cups; the avoidance of infected milk, meat or the inhalation of infected air.

Consumption, diphtheria, scarlet fever, typhoid fever, measles or any other contagious or infectious disease could be annihilated from the world if the governments of all the countries would spend enough money in carrying out the sanitary knowledge we possess.

In country houses the soil outside the kitchen door becomes a usual sink until it is sodden with filth and becomes a hot bed of putrification and a first class bacteriological laboratory of disease germs.

The old homesteads under the exacting eye of the sanitarian, are not always "what they seem." The vine clad porch and the honeysuckle, where mother used to sit is found to be a damp, musty, sunless nursery.

The "old well" with its pure, sweet water has become a test tube of colon bacillus. All of these things should be remedied, and when the diffusion of sanitary knowledge becomes general, these evils will cease.—Topeka Capital.

FOREIGN GIRLS IN PARIS.

Mrs. Travers Lewis, wife of the Archbishop of Ontario and Metropolitan of the Province of Canada, told recently in New York City at Sherry's the story of the Association of Mission Homes for English and American Young Women and Orphans in Paris, the work and its needs. To the foreign residents of Paris there is probably not a better-known philanthropic institution. It is almost as well known throughout the British Isles and in Canada. But in the United States, hundreds of whose daughters have found there not only a home but a hospitable refuge, a comprehensive knowledge of the institution is held by very few. The story of its founding—never, it is said, before told in an American publication—is the story of the devotion of a young English girl of gentle birth to the daughters of England and America among the breadwinners of Paris, whose only claim upon her was that they spoke the English tongue. It is a story that could hardly find its second outside the French capital, for beyond the confines of that city, which looks upon vice and winks at it, which laughs at misery and forgets it, there could hardly be made up the dramatic records of so many lives saved and reclaimed from a fate worse than death.

The young English girl who has done so much for the friendless Anglo-Saxon women in Paris is now a white-haired woman of mature years.

In Canada, where her husband has been a prelate of the English Church for years, she is best known as the wife of the Archbishop of Ontario. In London, however, in her own home in Manchester and particularly in Paris, she will always be best known as Ada Leigh. Had it not been for her philanthropic work she might never have had greater distinction than that of being the wife of a prelate of the Church of England and the daughter of Evan Leigh, the inventor of the twin screw for steamships, whose portrait hangs in the South Kensington Museum among those of England's great engineers.—New York Sun.
