ZURIEL LEWIS, Wells, Vt.

(From an old ambrotype made when he was 89.)

Zuriel Lewis (1236.XII v p 42 Vol. XII) the writer's grandfather, was b Sept. 30, 1764, at Cheshire, Conn., and was son of Barnabas (201) and Rachel (Curtis) Lewis. When 16 he joined the Connecticut minute men voluntarily taking the place of a neighbor who had a wife and six children. At this time the British sailing along Long Island Sound were landing for pillaging and burning the country. Horsemen riding through the country, after the manner of Paul Revere, roused the soldiers when they were needed. During part of this time

Zuriel was on duty while many of his comrades were home at work.

When 21, Zuriel m Lucy Bunnell, b Jany. 27, 1768, dau of Abner and Elizabeth (Preston) Bunnell of Cheshire, Ct. Soon after he removed to Poultney, Vt., and took up land on Wells Pond, now known as Lake St. Catharine, a body of water some seven miles long and very deep. To-day many cottages surround the lake and a fine pleasure steamer makes regular trips upon it. The town of Wells is at its foot. Here Zuriel built a small log cabin. The floor was split poles laid flat side up and the door a blanket in front of which nights he was compelled to maintain a large fire to keep off the wolves, panthers and bears.

Later Zuriel built a two story log house the stone foundation for which he laid up himself and which is to-day in a good state of preservation, although the house disappeared years ago. Later he purchased an adjoining farm and planted three orchards on the two farms. Many of the trees are bearing fruit to-day. One year he made 150 barrels of cider which he hauled 16 miles to Whitehall, N. Y., when he received 50 cents a barrel for them. He said it was the easiest earned money he ever earned. These farms were very rough and hilly and to-day six slate quarries are being worked upon them.

Zuriel was a very industrious man, being a farmer, horse-trainer, carpenter, stone mason, brick mason, plasterer, and besides made all the boots and shoes for his family of 12 children, who were all born on his original homestead. He became one of the most influential men in his town but lost everything he had from signing the bail bond of an U. S. officer and merchant.

In the spring of 1833 Zuriel and wife with two sons removed to Canada near Port Stanley on Lake Erie, but not wishing to take oath of allegiance to the English king in October of the same year he removed to Harbor Creek, 10 miles east of Erie, Penn. Here they lived with their son Marcus who had purchased there 113 acres of woodland. They lived to good old age, Lucy Bunnell Lewis d Feb. 3, 1843, ae. 75, and Zuriel Lewis d Jan. 12, 1854, in his 90th year. He was a conscientious Christian of the Episcopal church and a Whig in politics but voted for General Jackson for his 2nd term. His remains rest in an old grave yard one mile east of Harbor Creek, Penn.

RESOLUTIONS.

Adopted by the Loyal Lewis Legion.

WHEREAS, We regard the dastardly act by which the President of the United States has been cut down in the midst of his work, as a blow aimed at the vital and most cherished principles of our Order, therefore:

Resolved By us, representatives of the Supreme Castle of the Loyal Lewis Legion in behalf of said Legion, and all the members thereof scattered throughout the length and breadth of our Republic, that we deplore this awful deed as one committed,

First—Against the man, William McKinley, who in so eminent a degree possessed the characteristics, which we believe should mark the true man;

Second—Against the citizen, William McKinley, whose trust and confidence in the loyalty of his fellow citizens whom he in confidence daily met in the discharge of his public duties, has been so treacherously abused;

Third—Against the husband, William McKinley, by whose ruthless murder there has been destroyed the home of a family, "The shrine at which we believe all true people should worship;" Especially would we, as representatives of our Order, who have been promoted to the home counselor's degree, to whom the word home has a special and significant meaning, extend our sincerest sympathy to the surviving and bereaved member of that home, now sitting in the shadow of desolation at Canton, Ohio.

Fourth—Against the leader, William McKinley, who was a typical "peace maker and peace preserver;"

Fifth—Against William McKinley, President of our common country, the standard bearer of our flag, the emblem of our Orders and the chosen representative of our beloved country, to whose service and interests so many of our name and race have devoted their talents and their lives from the beginning of its history even to this day.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be placed upon the records of our Order and printed in LEWISIANA, the official organ of the Legion, that we may thereby both privately and publicly in this hour of our country's trial, steadfastly maintain our unwavering faith in the truth of our principles.

FRANK P. LEWIS,
Supreme Chancellor.
CARLL A. LEWIS,
Vice-Chancellor.
NATHAN B. LEWIS,
Supreme Herald.

Lewis Reunion.

The Second Reunion of the Lewis Family (James Lewis 1747-1819 and Abigail Douglass 1747-1830) was held at Rogers Lake, Chesterville, O., on Thursday, Aug. 29, 1901. J. B. Lewis of Mt. Gilead, O., is Vice-President. LEWISIANA hopes to be able to print later a fuller account of this meeting. At the first reunion there were present over 200 persons.

Lewis and Lewis.

FROM OLD LONDON TAVERNS.

Now Ye Olde Mitre, a very modest little house, stands just in the rear of the offices of a very well known legal firm, Messrs. Lewis and Lewis. Here in the early part of this century, the two brothers, James and George Lewis—father and uncle of the present Sir George (v p 192 Vol. IV.)—established the now celebrated firm.

The two brothers were totally unlike in their appearance. Dandy George, as the younger of the brothers was called, was the ornamental partner, and attended more particularly to the Insolvent Debtors department. I can see his somewhat jolly looking face now, with his well groomed, rather reddish whiskers very carefully brushed into a roll, reaching from ear to ear all round under his chin.

James Lewis was a totally different man, the best of friends, the cleverest of advocates, and the most dangerous opponent. Probably he was one of the clearest headed lawyers of his time. His knowledge of criminal law was so thorough that I have heard it said, "If James Lewis draws a man's indictment, it is bound to be followed by his conviction." A little, spare, sharp man he was, who listened carefully to the statement of a client's case, grasped every one of its points, and at once detecting the strong and weak ones, pro and con, he prepared to act accordingly.

GENEALOGICAL RECORDS.

Explanations, Abbreviations, etc.

For convenience the records of the various Lewis families are divided into Books and each Book into chapters. At the head of each Book appears the name of the earliest known ancestor of that family. The List of Books is a complete index to the Books as published to this time. New Books will be added from time to time as new branches of the Lewis family are found. As soon as Books are proved parts of others they will be merged into the Books to which they belong. Each name is numbered when first printed and whenever the name is repeated this number follows in brackets. The abbreviations commonly used in genealogical work are used, as b. for born; d. died; m. married; m. (1) first wife; dau. daughter; unm. not married; v. p. see page; etc.

CHAPTER CLXX.

FROM THE CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN.

After a year or two these two Lewises decided to form a partnership, and this resulted in the firm of Lewis, Newell and company, dealers in wool and hides. A. M. Lewis (26 v p 39 Vol. XII) was the silent member. Lewis, Brooks and company succeeded this firm and A. M. Lewis was still the silent partner.

This concern dissolved after a time, and Lewis and Tuttle sprung into existence, this time the Lewis being A. M. Lewis. Lewis, Tuttle, Howard and company came next, and then it was Lewis and Howard until 1879. After that until 1888 the firm was known as that of A. M. Lewis and company. Since then it was simply A. M. Lewis. He always continued in the wool business.

In 1865 Mr Lewis married Miss Harriet Tolles of Boston, by whom he had two daughters, Miss Marian and Miss Bertha, who with their mother survive him.

Mr. Lewis died a member of the Unitarian church. He was always a member of a liberal church, and while at his home in New York state was authorized to engage the Universalist clergymen, and decide upon their salaries. He was considered in the neighborhood to be a dangerous radical. The Church of the Redeemer was the first congregation he belonged to in Chicago. He was active in assisting Robert Collyer in establishing Unity Church, as was his cousin [H. B. Lewis (42) v p 20 Vol. XII.] He later became a member of the Third Unitarian Church, of which he was a trustee when he died.

CHAPTER CCCXLI.

FROM WATCH HILL, R. I., LIFE.

The largest of this year's cottages is El Reposo, near the Ocean Drive, just this side of Mr. Painter. Very different from any of the other summer residences at Watch Hill, it is a type of Spanish architecture, and not of wood outside, but of stucco walls and chimneys and roof of red Celadon open shingled tiles. Mr. E. F. Gilbert of New York is the architect. From the broad porch with its cherub-supported entablature of stucco bearing the cottage name, you enter the great living room through a door hospitably broad; you see one open house, the double parlors opening through columned arches to the living room, and the sun room into them. The rich dark red of the living room walls and the stairways and halls and the yellow of the sunlit parlors is in perfect harmony with the olive green of the dining room. The latter is finished in oak with a handsome sideboard and broad doors opening on the porch. Cypress is used in the rest of the first floor rooms and stairways.

Attractive features of the house are the great fireplace, of field-stone from Mrs. Babcock's (nee Eugenia Lewis 1101 v p 125 Vol. III) old homestead in Hopkinton; the den, with its curious oriel window into the ingle nook—this a little chimney corner on the ascent of the stairs, to be furnished in Oriental fashion.

The sleeping rooms are especially tasteful. There is a well-arranged photographic dark room on the third floor. The square stucco tower, red-tiled, rising from the mid-roof, looks from beyond New London nearly to Point Judith. The house while not the most expensive is one of the finest at Watch Hill.

CHAPTER CCCXLII.

FROM ANNALS OF YARMOUTH, N. S.

Waitstill Lewis (3160 v p 131 Vol. XI) owned 2 shares of the First Marine Insurance Co. of Yarmouth, N. S., which was in existence 1809 to 1812.

Of the original shareholders of the Yarmouth Marine Insurance Association were Benjamin Lewis and C. & W. Lewis [evidently Benjamin (3168) Charles (3171) and William (3173) v p 165 Vol. XI—ED.] In 1858 Nathan, Sheldon, Thomas M. (3185 v p 40 Vol. XII) and William Lewis were shareholders.

In the Acadian Insurance Co. (1888-1881) Nathan and Thomas M. Lewis held 1 share each.

In the Commercial Insurance Co. (1861-1885) Henry, Nathan and Sheldon Lewis owned 1 share each and Thomas M. and Nathan B. Lewis were among the directors.

In the Pacific Insurance Co. (1870-1891) Nathan B. Lewis was a director and many Lewises were shareholders; viz. Nathan B. and Thomas N. 3 each, Sheldon 2, and Henry, James and Nathan 1 each.

In the Oriental Insurance Co. (1874-1884) Henry Lewis was a director and Lewis shareholders were: Henry and Thomas M., 4 each; N. B., 3; George N., Sheldon and William W., 2 each; and Josiah B. and Nathan, 1 each.

All these companies were successful business ventures.

In the Commercial Wharf Co. Benjamin, Nathan and Sheldon Lewis owned 1 share each.

In 1886 in the list of Yarmouth ship owners are given Henry, Nathan B. and Alexander P. Lewis.

[Who will tell us more of all these Lewises?—ED.]

CHAPTER CCCXLIII.

For some reason the record of Nathan (77 v p 13 Vol. II) seems not to have been published as yet. He was son of John (35) and gr. son of James (5) the fourth son of John Lewis (1) of Westerly, R. I., 1661. Nathan (77) was one of a family of eleven, of whom the record of only one, Zebulon (78 v p 5 Vol. IV) has been worked out. His brother John (82) b July, 1751 m Amy Wilcox, it is said. Nathan (77) b May 23, 1733, Westerly, R. I., m. Dec. 16, 1756 by Thomas Kenyon, J. P., Mary Adams, of Richmond, R. I. Of the ch. b 1st 3 at Charlestown, R. I., rest at Richmond, R. I. Between 50 and 60 of the members and a large number of the friends of the 7th Rhode Island Veteran Association journeyed to Crescent Park Aug. 8th to hold their annual reunion and a general good time. Shortly after their arrival and before proceeding to do battle with one of caterer Lewis's (John F. Lewis of Providence, R. I.) shore dinners the veterans held their annual business meeting. Nathan B. Lewis (667 v p 114 Vol. XI) was elected President for the 9th time successively.

He was one of the number who first petitioned for a postoffice for Plainville, then known as the Great Plain of Farmington. The name of Plainville was selected at his suggestion and the name was adopted and the first postoffice was established at the Blossom corner about 1832. He lived for a time in Bristol but returned and settled in Plainville where he continued a resident to the time of his death. He was honored by his fellow townsmen with public offices as selectman, assessor, justice of the peace, and as representative of the town in 1876 and 1880. At the organization of the Congregational church (2nd) in 1840, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis were participants, their names being enrolled among the first. In 1847 he was elected deacon of the church which office he held to the end of his life." His son Charles C. is a geologist res. at Plainville, Ct.

CHAPTER CCIV.

FROM DRYGOODSMAN AND GENERAL MERCHANT, OF ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Interstate Merchants' Association, organized for the purpose of securing reduced rates to St. Louis for the retailers who make this city their base of supplies, has probably done more for the trade development of the city than any other agency. From the birth of the organization its efforts in this direction have been crowned with well deserved success, and to-day the Interstate Merchants' Association is one of the most influential factors in the commerce of the city.

The association was organized and perfected in St. Louis four years ago and it now has a membership of 6,000 merchants in the territory in which it operates. During the existence of the organization the number of buyers coming to St. Louis has been more than doubled. This result was not attained without the hardest kind of work by the members of the association, all of whom devoted their time and labor to the advancement of St. Louis' trade interests without remuneration. To-day the name, Interstate Merchants' Association, is considered, through the South and West, to be synonymous with progress and development.

The future work of this organization promises to be even more effectual in bringing business to the city in the next few years than it has been in the past. The officers of the association are hustling business men who thoroughly appreciate the worth of St. Louis and they are determined that the city's light shall not be hid under a bushel. One of the most earnest workers in the cause of St. Louis is Edward S. Lewis (1126 v v p 19 Vol. VI.) president of the Interstate Merchants' Association. He is vice-president of the Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. The idea of sending a delegation of representative business men to Texas originated with him and ever since the movement was started he has been an indefatigable worker for its success. As president of the Interstate Merchants' Association and vice-president of the Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. he is well-known to all the business men of St. Louis.

ROBERT LEWIS, Wales to Va.

CHAPTER CXLIV.

FROM LIGHTON'S LEWIS AND CLARK.
In March, 1804, before the expedition set out, the newly acquired Louisiana Territory was divided by Congress, the dividing line being the 33d parallel. The southern portion was named the District of New Orleans, and the northern, the District of Louisiana; this name being changed, a year later, to Louisiana Territory.

On March 3d, 1807, Meriwether Lewis (64.XXXV). was made governor of this territory, with headquarters at the village of St. Louis; and this office he held until he died, October 11, 1809, at the age of 35 years.

Although his service in this position was so untimely short, he did much toward laying a firm foundation for the institutions of lawful and orderly life....In the newly organized society, events rapidly took form. Governor Lewis, with two others (judges of the court.), constituted the territorial legislature, which concerned itself at once with matters of development,—providing for the establishment of towns, laying out roads, etc. In 1808 the laws of Louisiana Territory were collected and published, under the supervision of the legislature. This was the first book printed in St. Louis. A post-office was established also in 1808, and soon afterward the first newspaper appeared. From a mere frontier trading settlement, whose conduct was regulated by untamed impulses, St. Louis was being put in the way of its present greatness.

Aside from these purely administrative duties, the governor was further occupied in endeavoring to secure permanent peace with the Indians, and to prepare them for receiving the advantages of civilized life. This was his largest thought, growing naturally out of all that he had seen and done in the years preceding; and in it he was supported and inspired by continued association with Captain Clark, who had been appointed Indian agent for the territory. He had plenty to do; and in such intervals as could be found, he was preparing for publication the history of his travels.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

FROM N. Y. EVENING POST.

FAMOUS NEW YORK FAMILIES.

XVI. THE LEWISES.

In 1765 Francis (1) Lewis was selected as a committeeman for New York by the five delegates to the Colonial Congress. Shortly after, he became a member and organizer of the "Sons of Liberty;" was a delegate to the Continental Congress from 1776 to 1779, and a signer of the Declaration of Independence and of the Articles of Confederation.

His wife was as imposing a figure in Revolutionary days as he himself. She was endowed with unusual attainments, and conducted in person the education of her children. At her home, whether in New York or at Whitestone, Long Island, she dispensed hospitality with a graceful hand, and was a favorite with the leaders of the early republic. She was fiercely patriotic, and willingly faced death for the sake of her convictions. Shortly after the British occupation of New York, a detachment of redcoats was sent to destroy the Lewis home and to capture the mistress. She witnessed the destruction of her house with unruffled tranquillity. Taken to New York by her captors, she was thrown into the common prison and denied a bed or any extra clothing. Here she was treated as the vilest criminal for many months. The matter was reported to Washington, who immediately put under arrest the wife of the British Paymaster-General and the wife of the Attorney-General until they should be exchanged for Mrs. Lewis.

The prompt action of the American commander had the desired effect; the lady was released from prison and put upon the jail liberties of the city. Her sufferings and privation were too much even for her vigorous constitution, and she contracted a fever which developed into lingering consumption. She lived to see her children married, but not her country liberated from British rule.

CHAPTER LXXXI.

FROM THE CONGREGATIONALIST.

On a summer afternoon in the year 1883, a South Dakota farmer was looking at his wheat field, out of which the hot sun and wind were speedily driving every prospect of a harvest. As he looked at the withering crop he did not indulge in loud lamentations or vain regrets. Only one word rose to his lips, "Why?" Because of that question he is known all over the West to-day as "Soil-Culture Campbell," and many an abundant harvest is growing on what would otherwise have been an "abandoned farm" because Mr. Campbell took for his motto that which Klipping avers to be the motto of the mongoose, "Go and find out." If you looked at his name or the color of his whiskers you would say he was surely a canny Scot, but when you hear him tell the story of his experiments in soil culture you see at once that he could not possibly be anything but a Yankee with several generations of Vermont ancestry behind him.
