Lieut. Horatio Farnham Lewis.

• Horatio Farnham Lewis (1631.XII), son of Marcus and Sarah (Allen) Lewis, born March 27, 1845, at Harbor Creek, Pa., was a noted school boy orator who was much sought after and called on at spelling schools and exhibitions and later at various public and political meetings, often composing his own declamations.

He early evinced an eager desire to learn military tactics, procured and thoroughly mastered Hardy's tactics. He was promised an appointment to West Point, but the Congressman disappointed him. When 12 years old he formed a boys' military company, arming them with wooden guns and swords which he had made. The Adjutant-General of Pennsylvania said of it that it was the best drilled company in the State. When 15 he changed his command into an artillery company, making himself the gun-carriages with the exception of the wheels. In the political campaign of 1860 he with his company was an attraction in all the parades at Erie, Penn., Buffalo, N. Y., and Cleveland, O., as well as in many smaller towns.

He was a good shot with both rifle and revolver. With his rifle he would bring down from the tallest chestnut or oak the squirrel with a bullet through his head every time. He could put six shots from a revolver into a bull's eye at 15 paces.

He enlisted Aug. 6, 1862, and was mustered into service Aug. 27th as Sergeant Co. D. 145th Pa. Vols. He was promoted to Orderly Sergeant Sept. 5th, and on Sept. 25th to Sergeant Major of the Regiment. In camp at Erie, Pa., he was detailed by Col. Brown to drill the officers of the regiment. In the battle of Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862, he was severely wounded, the bullet passing through the instep of his right foot, ripping the sole of his boot. He was also in mud and water to the waist, wading through slough holes to reach the enemy's works. Promoted to 1st Lieutenant Jan. 7, 1863, he rejoined and took command of Company D. on Mar. 6, 1863, although he was scarcely able to walk. General Hancock wished and came near recommending him for promotion as Major over all the Captainants and Lieutenants of the regiment.

At Gettysburg while leading his company into action, Lieut. Lewis had the bone of his leg crushed close to the body. Carried to the rear he lay in the hot sun the rest of the day and all the next and was without food or drink during the drenching rain of the night of July 3d and nearly all day of the 4th, being unable to move a hand owing to the loss of blood. On the withdrawal of the enemy he was cared for and his leg amputated but he died on the 20th of July. His brother, James, was with him and brought home his remains which were buried at Erie, Pa. There was scarce a dry eye at his funeral when the entire population turned out to mourn for him.

The G. A. R. Post at Fairview was named after him although the names of several Generals and Colonels were proposed. Most all of his boy soldiers followed him into the army. The following lines written on his death in 1863 by Miss Eliza Wells seem worthy of reproduction here and of being permanently preserved in Lewis records.

One more chord on our harp has been severed,

Leaving its companions so lonely and still,
That it seemed as tho' melody never could sweep them,
Or naught but a dirge among them could thrill.

One more star from a bright constellation,
Has fled from its sphere to one fair, and more bright;
Our world seems as gloomy, the days dark and dreary,
Bright star in our firmament, we miss thy loved light.

Left he his home, in manhood's fair morning
With a brave heart to battle for right 'gainst the wrong;
Few was his years, yet loved he his country,
And in its defence his young arm grew strong.

Though many have fallen and many may yet fall
In destroying the demon which reigns in our land,
Yet none are there nobler, or more justly called "Hero"
Than Horatio who left us a sad mourning band.

Yet this, this bright star has left us in darkness,
Thro' faith its bright splendor we hail from afar,
And may not be then, if to angels 'tis given,

Look down on us here, and be our guiding star?

And its light will grow brighter and approach to us nearer

As he views that loved father now stricken with care,
Looking to Him who gave up "his only begotten"

That we might in Heaven his rich blessings share.

Sisters and brothers, companions who loved him,

In Heaven he awaits us and beckoning says "come,"

He regrets not his fate since the death angel only

Called him hence from Earth's sorrows to a Heavenly home.

James Lewis.

FROM THE STAGE REMINISCENCES OF MRS. GILBERT.

Trouble began to break out at the second Fifth Avenue Theatre, although it took a year or more to bring it to a head.... Lewis left after a battle royal with the "Governor" and only those were retained who were necessary to support Miss Davenport in a starring tour.... I was anxious to have "Jimmie" Lewis back in the company, too, and sounded the "Governor" about it. "Well, bring him in to see me some day," Mr. Daly said; "I fancy we can arrange all that. I got rid of a lot of hard feeling and bad blood in crossing that ocean." So Lewis and I came into the orchestra chairs one day when Mr. Daly was superintending a rehearsal. He came over and shook hands quietly and pleasantly, just as if there had never been any quarrel, and everything was arranged beautifully. And then, oddly enough, Lewis made a great fuss over the very first part that was given him. In "Our First Families" it was. "There" he said, his face all twisted up with half-laughing disgust with himself; "you see how it is. I can't help it. I'm a born kicker, and I shall always be a kicker."

With such preparation Miss Rehan was as ready to take up the work that fell to her under Mr. Daly's management as John Drew was to undertake his. Mr. Lewis and I were old "play"-mates, and so we four "The Big Four" someone has called us—grew to understand one another thoroughly and our working together was not only a pleasure to our audiences, but a real delight to us.... Only Miss Rehan and I remained of the "Big Four." Success had taken John Drew from us and dear "Jimmie" Lewis with all his lovable ailings and failings, had died (v p 96 Vol. VII).

GENEALOGICAL RECORDS.

Explanations, Abbreviations, etc.

For convenience the records of the various Lewis families are divided into Books and each Book into chapters. At the head of each Book appears the name of the earliest known ancestor of that family. The List of Books is a complete index to the Books as published to this time. New Books will be added from time to time as new branches of the Lewis family are found. As soon as Books are proved parts of others they will be merged into the Books to which they belong. Each name is numbered when first printed and whenever the name is repeated this number follows in brackets. The abbreviations commonly used in genealogical work are used, as b. for born; d. died; m. married; m. (1) first wife; dan. daughter; unm. not married; v. p. see page; etc.

CHAPTER CLXXIV.

A NEW HAVEN, CT., CLIPPING.

At the second day's session of the state grange on Tuesday, Jany. 14, 1902, the members were present in large numbers, as the woman's work committee was to make its report. The report of the committee was presented by Mrs. Martha Ewell Lewis (1083 v p 68 Vol. X.) The matrons' exchange has been one of the culminating events of the year. This work has been pressed upon the attention of the granges and the idea is gaining support in all the sections of the state in the subordinate granges. Mrs. Lewis felt assured that the future work of the matrons would be met and carried forward to completion with a hopeful and earnest spirit. She believed that the matrons have the power to abolish bondage to ignorant rule and to elevate the character of housekeeping.

Mrs. Lewis, who is the chairman of the committee on woman's work, resides here. She is the daughter of George Beekwith, the old mathematician and founder of Beekwith's almanac. Since the death of Mr. Beekwith Mrs. Lewis has edited the almanac.

CHAPTER CCLXXXIV.

DIED.—In Stratford, Conn., Jany. 11, 1902, Henry James Lewis (377 v p 56, Vol. IV), ae 60 years. Interment at Meriden, Conn.

FROM THE MERIDEN MORNING RECORD

Mr. Lewis was born in Meriden and lived here until about twenty-two years ago. For several years before leaving town he was a member of the firm of Griswold & Lewis, being a partner of N. F. Griswold, the founder of the well known hardware house.

He was a large stockholder in the International Silver Co. and also a director of the company. He owned stock in the Meriden National bank, the Meriden Trust & Safe Deposit company, of which he was a director, the Meriden Cemetery association, the Horton Printing company, being president of it, and a stockholder and a director in E. Miller & Co.

Mr. Lewis frequently visited in Meriden on business and to the home of his sisters, Mrs. J. H. Chapin and Mrs. Charles H. Fales.

Henry J. Lewis was not a seeker after publicity or popularity. He devoted his time to his business and his home. Many of the qualities which made his lamented father, Hon. Isaac C. Lewis (75 v p 121, Vol IV) so widely known and loved were his. In business he was shrewd, sagacious and conservative. The community in which he lived found in him one of the most public-spirited of the citizens. Whatever promised to make for the public welfare received from him support as substantial as it was prompt. No deserving case of charity ever appealed to him in vain.

FROM THE BRIDGEPORT FARMER.

While Mr. Lewis was a comparatively new comer in these parts, no man in Stratford has done more for its people. Shrewd and business like, he still had a heart of great tenderness, and no appeal for charity, for help, or for the bettering of the community, was ever made to him that did not meet with quick and generous response. One recent instance is strikingly characteristic. The first contributor to the proposed Boys' club, on the subscription list, was H. J. Lewis, and the amount was generous.

In 1881 the deceased moved from Stony Creek, where he was engaged in the oyster business, to Bridgeport, and took up his home temporarily at the Atlantic hotel. His advent meant much to the oyster interests here.

FROM THE BRIDGEPORT STANDARD.

About 18 years ago Henry J. Lewis, was one of the first men in the state to realize the importance which the oyster growing industry was to attain, took up his home in Stratford, and organized the H. J. Lewis Oyster company, of which he was the president, and really the sole owner, having purchased stock subsequent to the organization. This concern is the largest holder of oyster grounds in Connecticut waters, having title to more than 10,000 acres. The H. J. Lewis Oyster company is engaged in the seed oyster and oyster exporting business. Mr. Lewis also controlled the Blue Point Oyster Cultivation company of Sayville, L. I., and owned large oyster beds in Narragansett Bay, R. I.

Mr. Lewis was a man who was accorded the respect of every community of which he had been a resident and deserved that respect. His death causes a severe loss to Stratford, Bridgeport and Meriden, where his business enterprise and sagacity were of great benefit.

FROM THE NEW HAVEN REGISTER.

Mr. H. J. Lewis married Miss Stringer, sister of Mrs. Miller, and purchased the Bates property on Main street, Stratford, in which he lived and died. Mr. Lewis moved rapidly forward in his business and extended his territory until he eclipsed all oyster growers. Mr. Lewis' beds cover 10,000 acres and are located in Narragansett Bay, about Sayville, L. I., and from Faulkner's Island to Norwalk, with few breaks on the northern shore of the Sound.

Among his army of employes, Mr. Lewis was almost revered. He was a strict disciplinarian, exacting to a degree, yet willing at all times to recompense in full for all he demanded. His men were well paid for their labor and irrespective of any agreement an advance of salary was voluntary where attention to duty and honest work warranted it. At home he was as one of his children; happy in disposition, hearty and generous in his welcome. Besides a widow, four children, two boys and two girls, survive him.

CHAPTER CCLXXXV.

BY H. W. MACOMBER, N. Y. CITY.

The following memorandum has been preserved in our branch of the family and carries the record to John Lewis (1728), probably the first in this country who bore the name of Lewis.

"A memorandum of the Lewis family organized from Hartfordshire, England, on or near the first settlement in America by the Puritans.

John (1728), the father of a numerous family consisting of ten sons and one daughter, settled at Hadley, soon afterwards moved to Hartford, from thence his sons went abroad, Ezekiel went to Boston, Elihu to Litchfield, William to Farmington, Samuel to Bristol, one to New York, one to Stratford, one to Warwick, one to South Carolina. The other two sons remained with their parents.

The above is a schedule of the family as nearly as can be recollected by one of the descendants who has seen what is written above placed on paper in the private Library of his uncle, Rev. John Lewis (808) of Weathersfield.

Signed, MARTIN LEWIS ($50)"

CHAPTER CLIII.

FROM THE PROVIDENCE, R. I. JOURNAL

Capt. Augustus N. Miller (v p 89, Vol. VII) in the 60s well known as a pilot and master of some of the Old Colony Line steamers between New York and Fall River, and recognized in Bristol, where he resided all his life, as an authority on genealogical matters, died Dec. 14, 1901, at his home at an advanced age. He was a man of noble character, well known for his integrity of purpose and most highly respected in the town where he was born (Feby. 9, 1816) and resided all his days.

He was an authority on Bristol history of long ago, and was so interested in this subject that he could tell a brief history of every old house in his native town, and was often called upon to give his opinion in such matters. His memory was most retentive, particularly in relation to genealogy and matters historical about Bristol. He resided and died in a dwelling at the corner of Hope and Church streets that was built in 1807 by Rev. David A. Leonard, the grandfather of the present Secretary of State, John Hay, who was Postmaster in Bristol in the first part of the last century. It was on the site of the Capt. Miller residence in Bristol that the British troops burned the residence of Capt. Simeon Potter, a noted sea commander in Bristol of long ago. The first persons known to have lived on this corner were Capt. Miller's gt. gt. gt. grandparents, Henry Bragg and Elizabeth McMullen who m Dec. 17, 1677.

Capt. Miller was a descendant of people of the Colonial and Revolutionary periods on both sides, and his ancestors were among the first to settle in Bristol upwards of 200 years ago.

[Readers of LEWISIANA will sympathize with Capt. Miller's dau., Mrs. Fielding Lewis Williams in this her latest affliction following so quickly after the death of her mother, May 31, 1900, and a dau. Sept. 4, 1901 (v p 110 Vol. XII) to whom the grandfather was greatly devoted. ED.]

FROM THE NASHVILLE AMERICAN.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

The committee (v last issue) performed its task, and reported to the next General Assembly as follows:

'Looking upon the object to be accomplished to be one highly honorable to the State, the undersigned entered upon the duties assigned them most cheerfully and with as little delay as possible. They consulted with the most eminent artists and practical mechanics as to the kind of monument to be erected, and a plan being agreed upon they employed Mr. Lemuel W. Kirby, of Columbia, to execute it for the sum of $509.

"The entire monument is twenty and a half feet high. The design is simple, but is intended to express the difficulties, successes and violent determination of a life which was marked by bold enterprise, by manly courage and devoted patriotism.

"The base of the monument is of rough, unhewn stone, eight feet high and nine feet square where it rises to the surface of the ground. On this rests a plinth of cut stone four feet square and eighteen inches in thickness, on which are the inscriptions, which are given below. On this plinth stands a broken column eleven feet high and two and a half feet in diameter at the base and a few inches smaller at the top. The top is broken to denote the violent and untimely end of a bright and glorious career. The base is composed of a species of sand stone found in the neighborhood of the grave. The plinth and shaft, or column, are made of a fine lime stone, commonly known as Tennessee marble. Around the monument is erected a handsome wrought iron fence.

Great care was taken to identify the grave. George Nixon, Esq., an old surveyor, had become very early acquainted with its locality. He pointed out the place, but to make assurance doubly sure the grave was reopened and the upper portion of the skeleton examined and such evidences found as to leave no doubt of the place of interment. Witnesses were called and their certificate, with that of the surveyor, proved the fact beyond dispute.

CHAPTER CLX.

FROM N. Y. EVENING POST.

In covers of imperial purple and with letter press of a similar hue, Mrs. Annah Robinson Watson of Memphis, Tenn., proves by genealogical tables which he who runs may read that there are at this moment living in America no less than 100 persons through whose veins courses the blood of Alfred the Great. The book is appropriately named "A Royal Lineage," and the texture of its cover is suggestively set-off with the reputed dragon standard of the celebrated Wessex monarch,

In the body of the book the author shows the ascent by name to the first American ancestors; then she gives a list of those persons living who claim descent from those Pilgrims, Puritans, Pioneers, etc., who came to America, and the line is complete.

Among the individuals mentioned in the pages of the book are descendants of Col. John Lewis of Warner Hall, Col. Charles Lewis of the Byrd, Col. Robert Lewis of Belvoir, Col. Fielding Lewis. The volume is a handsome piece of bookmaking and is illustrated with copies of fine old portraits and the arms of the various families.

CHAPTER CLXI.

FROM THE PORTLAND OREGONIAN.

As the people of the United States are pretty well informed by this time, the exposition which will be held in Portland four years hence will be commemorative of the Lewis and Clark expedition, which, under the patronage of the National Government, came westward from St. Louis, Missouri, and reached the shores of the Pacific Ocean at the mouth of the Columbia River in 1805. The expedition was primarily one of exploration, and incidentally one of discovery. The last named feature was most potent as affecting the future of the vast section subsequently known as Oregon Territory, and now contained within the National boundary lines.

The official name of the centennial celebration of this event, selected after much careful thought on the part of its promoters, is as follows: "Where Rolls the Oregon"; The Lewis and Clark Centennial, American-Pacific Exposition and Oriental Fair." With the view of facilitating the work of getting the exposition matters in definite shape, a company composed of fifty of the wealthy and most progressive men of the state has already been formed.

Two proposed sites for the exposition are the University Park at Portland which commands a view of all of Portland, the beautiful stretches of the Willamette and Columbia Rivers and all the scenic grandeur of towering snow peaks along the Cascade Mountain Range, and the City View Park, overlooking the Willamette just above Portland. This site commands a view of scenic attractions unexcelled and unrivaled. All the snow-capped peaks to the east and north are seen from this point. What gives this site an added value from a sentimental standpoint is the statement that it was a landing-place of Lewis and Clark.

PORTLAND, Ore., January 22.—Permanent organization was effected yesterday of the Lewis and Clark fair, to be held here in 1905. The following officers were elected: President, H. W. Corbett; Vice-President, H. W. Scott; Secretary, H. E. Reed.

The Editor would suggest to the Directors the especial appropriateness of a Meriwether Lewis Day, in the summer of 1905, to be devoted to the life and services of this leader of one of our greatest National achievements.

Who is the nearest living kin of Captain Meriwether Lewis?
