THE

Century Magazine.

With the November, 1887, issue THE CENTURY commences its thirty-fifth volume with a regular circulation of 250,000. The War Papers and the Life of Lincoln increased its monthly edition by 100,000. The latter history having recounted the events of Lincoln's early years, and given the necessary survey of the political condition of the country, reaches a new period, with which his secretaries were most intimately acquainted. Under the caption

Lincoln in the War,

the writers now enter on the more important part of their narrative, viz.: the early years of the War and President Lincoln's part therein.

Supplementary War Papers,

following the "battle series" by distinguished generals, will describe interesting features of army life, tunnelling from Libby Prison, narratives of personal adventure, etc. General Sherman will write on "The Grand Strategy of the War."

Kenan on Siberia.

Except the Life of Lincoln and the War Articles, no more important series has ever been undertaken by THE CENTURY than this of Mr. Kenan's. With the previous preparation of four year's travel and study in Russia and Siberia, the author undertook a journey of 15,000 miles for the special investigation here required. An introduction from the Russian Minister of the Interior admitted him to the principal mines and prisons, where he became acquainted with some three hundred State exiles—Liberals, Nihilists, and others,—and the series will be a startling as well as accurate revelation of the exile system. The many illustrations by the artist and photographer, Mr. George A. Frost, who accompanied the author, will add greatly to the value of the articles.

A Novel by Eggleston

with illustrations will run through the year. Shorter novels will follow by Cable and Stockton. Shorter fictions will appear every month.

Miscellaneous Features

will comprise several illustrated articles on Ireland, by Charles DeKay; paper touching the field of the Sunday School Lessons, illustrated by R. L. Wilson; wild Western life, by Theodore Roosevelt; the English Cathedrals, by Mrs. Van Rensselaer, with illustrations by Pernell; Dr. Buckley's valuable papers on Dreams, Spiritualism, and Clairvoyance; essays in Criticism, art, travel, and biography; poems; cartoons; etc.

By a special offer the numbers for the past year (containing the Lincoln history) may be secured with the year's subscription from Nov. 1887, twenty-four issues in all, for $6.00, or, with the last year's numbers handsomely bound $7.50.

Published by the THE CENTURY Co., 33 East 17th street, New York.

CHAPTER IX.

BY FANNY LEWIS MARSHALL,
GREENWICH, N. Y.

The following obituary was taken from a local paper.

"Mrs. Phoebe, wife of A. B. Darling, died at 3 o'clock this Wednesday morning after an illness of three months of spinal paralysis. This illness was not at first considered necessarily fatal but of late it began to develop serious complications and for several weeks past there has been little hope of recovery.

Phoebe Ann Lewis was born in Petersburg, N. Y., May 31st, 1815, and at an early age removed with her family to this town. On Nov. 27, 1830, she was married to A. B. Darling and their entire wedded life has been spent in this town. They have had five children, two daughters of whom are dead, and Joseph and Charles A. Darling and Mrs. S. D. Lewis with the affectionate husband and father still survive. Mrs. Darling has for nearly forty years been a consistent member of the Baptist church of this place.

The deceased was a woman of lovely character and lived a rare life of sweetness, patience, kindness and good deeds. She was greatly loved and respected outside her family, and in her home she was the object of unbounded love and devotion. She was worthy of it, for she was tender, faithful, wise and good. The sympathies of many friends in the community go out to the aged husband and his afflicted family.

The funeral will occur at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon, from the house on Church-st."

She was one of 14 children of Uriah Lewis of whom mention is made at page 43, chapter 3.

In the next chapter we expect to be able to present a sketch of the life and services of the late Hon. Harris Lewis, of Frankfort, N. Y.

BOOK XII.

WILLIAM LEWIS, Ship Lion, 1632.

CHAPTER VII.

BY SETH LEWIS, ULYSSES, PA.

Orange A. Lewis, (page 30,) eldest son of Jesse and Hannah (Thurston) Lewis was born Dec. 23, 1806 at Upper Lisle, N. Y. and grew to manhood there. October 12, 1828, he married M. Lavinia, eldest daughter of James and Abigail (Hulburt) Lewis, also of Upper Lisle. June 6, 1830, he started on foot for the wilds of Potter county, Pa., with an ax on his shoulder from which hung a bundle containing his change of clothing. Arriving at Ulysses, then an almost unbroken wilderness, June 10th, 1830, he began cutting away the forest where he decided the log house should be put up for his new home. February 28, 1831, his family arrived from Upper Lisle and moved into the house he had been able to but barely make habitable about Apr. 1, 1831. In 1833 he was appointed Treasurer of Potter county, so early did his worth become known. An eventful and honorable public career followed. He was elected Justice of the Peace in 1835. Sheriff of Potter county in 1841, appointed Associate Judge in 1846, elected to the same office in 1851 for a term of five years. Retiring from office in 1856 after a public service of nearly a quarter of a century, he was probably the most popular man in the county. October 29, 1861 at 55 years of age he enlisted as a private into Co. "G." 53d Regt. Pa. Vols. and died at Harrison's Landing, Va., August 14, 1862, a martyr to his wavering devotion to duty as well as to the cause of universal freedom.

Two incidents of his life are worthy of a place in the LEWIS LETTER as illustrating the character of one of the noblest of the Lewis race and as incentives to all young people but especially to those who may be able to claim him as their kinsman, to lead lives worthy of their age and their race.

He spent the first two winters after arriving in Ulysses mostly in threshing on the Cowanesque to get grain for use the following season. The second winter he threshed for a Mr. Cushing, with whom he made an agreement that ten bushels of wheat should be measured out and put away for him, to be paid for in the spring at $2.00 a bushel, the market price at that time. After sugaring, he took a load of maple sugar, went to Cowanesque, sold it and carried the $20 to Mr. Cushing. On receiving it Mr. Cushing said to him: "Young man, do you know that the price of wheat has fallen to $1.00 a bushel, and that you can buy ten bushels of wheat now and have $10 left?" "I do," replied Mr. Lewis. "Did we not," said Mr. Lewis, "agree upon the price last winter, and have you not kept the wheat for me according to the bargain?" "Oh yes," said Mr. Cushing, "I should have sold it last winter at the market price, if I had not agreed to keep it for you." "If it had risen in price to $4.00 a bushel," said Mr. Lewis, "would you now refuse to let me have it or charge me that price for it?" "Certainly I should not," said Mr. Cushing. "Why," said Mr. Lewis, "should I be less honest than you?" "You have done right" said Mr. Cushing, "and have won my respect and confidence. Few young men would have done as you have done."

Upright and true-hearted as he was this decision, no doubt, cost him a struggle. A devoted husband and a fond father, he could hardly have failed to think of the wife and little daughter in his forest home, for whom $10 meant many comforts to which they had lately been strangers, but neither conjugal affection nor parental love could obscure his clear perception of right nor swerve him from the path of duty.

Whether influenced by a desire to live in a region which produced such men as Mr. Lewis had shown himself to be, or by some other motive Mr. Cushing moved to Ulysses that season. He was almost immediately chosen one of the commissioners of Potter County, and one of the first duties devolving on the Board of Commissioners was the selection of a man for County Treasurer who should go to Philadelphia and receipt and bring back about $5,000, which had accumulated from taxes since the county was set off from McKean County. Honesty as well as capacity was needed. It was a large sum of money and all the settlers were poor men. It was evident that only a man of strict integrity should be appointed. They began to cast about for a suitable man. Suddenly Mr. Cushing addressed his fellow commissioners as follows: "Gentlemen, I know the man we need. Orange A. Lewis, of Ulysses, is a man we can trust." He was appointed and fully justified the confidence reposed in him.

The other incident, though it increases our appreciation of the innate nobility of the man causes sorrow at its characteristic result.

When McClellan's army reached Harrison's Landing, Va., in July 1862, Mr. Lewis was exhausted. Not possessing the recuperative power of a younger man he gradually sunk under the deadly influences of the time and place. Orders were issued to send the dangerously sick to northern hospitals and he was about to be placed on board a hospital transport boat Russell L. Burnside, a comrade who was also sick desired to go but the boat could carry no more than had already been designated by the surgeon. Burnside begged that some one would give up his place, and with that generosity which had always distinguished him, Mr. Lewis offered his chance to his whimpering comrade though far less feeble than Mr. Lewis. Burnside was mean spirited enough to accept the generous offer. When transportation north could again be given to the sick of the 53d. Regt. Mr. Lewis was too ill to be removed, and he died for want of the pure air and careful nursing which he surrendered to his selfish comrade; while Burnside lived to disgrace himself and bring ruin upon those among whom the self-sacrifice of Mr. Lewis had enabled him to come. Painful as this result was to those who had known Mr. Lewis, it was a characteristic and fitting close to his singularly unselfish life, to which the unworthiness of the comrade for whom he sacrificed himself gives added interest. He but joined the army of noble men and women whose names and deeds illumine the pages of history and prove the divine origin and nature of humanity.

THE DEAD OF A GREAT WAR.

Official returns show that about 2,900,000 soldiers enlisted during the late war, in response to the successive calls of President Lincoln, and that of this number 186,097 were colored troops. Of this number

New York furnished 467,047 men.
 Pennsylvania furnished 366,107 men.
 Ohio furnished 319,659 men.
 Illinois furnished 259,147 men.
 Indiana furnished 197,147 men.
 Massachusetts furnished 152,048 men.
 Missouri furnished 109,111 men.

These figures do not include men who enlisted for a shorter period than ninety days and, estimating on the basis of New York's enlistment of 17,213, it is fair to calculate that the aggregate of troops furnished by the States for the Union armies was at least 3,000,000.

Additional reports show that the Northern and Southern armies met in over 2,000 skirmishes and battles. In 148 of these conflicts the loss of the Federal side was 500 men, and in at least 10 battles over 10,000 men were reported lost on each side. The appended table shows that the combined losses of the Federal and Confederate forces in killed, wounded and missing in the following engagements were: Shiloh, 24,000; Antietam, 38,000; Stone River, 37,000; Chancellorsville, 28,000; Gettysburg, 53,000; Chickamauga, 33,000; McClellan's Peninsula campaign, 50,000; Grant's Peninsula campaign, 180,000, and Sherman's campaign, 125,000.

Official statistics show that of the 3,000,000 men enlisted there were:

Killed in battle.....	44,238
Died of wounds.....	49,205
Died of disease.....	186,216
Died of unknown causes.....	24,184

Total ..... 303,843

This includes only those whose death while in the army has been actually proven. To this number should be added, first, 26,000 men who are known to have died while in the hands of the enemy as prisoners of war, and many others in the same manner whose deaths are to-day unrecorded; second, a fair percentage of the 205,794 men who are put down on the official reports as deserters; third, thousands who are buried in private cemeteries all over the North who died while home on a furlough.

By an act of Congress, approved July 27, 1862, the President was empowered to purchase cemetery grounds, and to cause them to be securely inclosed, for the purpose of national cemeteries for the soldiers who should die in the service of the country. Subsequent acts provided that the Secretary of War should take steps to preserve from desecration the graves of soldiers who fell in battle or died of disease during the rebellion, and to enclose the grounds so that the resting places of the honored dead should be kept sacred forever. No nation of either ancient or modern times after a great war, made such systematic and successful efforts to gather the remains of their dead and secure for them honored burials.

A recent report shows that the nation's dead are buried in 79 national cemeteries, of which only 12 are in the Northern States. Among the principal ones in the North are Cypress Hills, with its 3,786 dead; Finn's Point, N. J., which contains the remains of 2,644 unknown dead; Gettysburg, Pa., with its 1,967 known and 1,608 unknown dead; Mound City, Ill., with 2,505 known and 2,721 unknown graves; Philadelphia, with its 1,909 dead, and Woodlawn, Elmira, N. Y., with its 3,090 dead. In the South, near the scenes of terrible conflicts, are located the largest repositories of the nation's heroic dead:

Arlington, Va., 16,264, of which 4,849 are unknown.

Beaufort, S. C., 9,241, of whom 4,493 are unknown.

Chalmette, La., 12,511, of which 5,674 are unknown.
