GEORGE WASHINGTON LEWIS.

Born in Stonington, Conn., 1812, Apr. 13, in 1826 the subject of this sketch removed with his parents to Blandford, Mass., where at the age of eighteen years he became an enlisted member of a light infantry company in which he served seven years. In 1837 he was elected ensign of the company and was attached to the First brigade of the Fourth Division of Infantry. In 1840 Ensign Lewis was elected first lieutenant of the company remaining in active service until 1845 when the company disbanded from service. He still preserves his original commission papers signed by Govs. Edward Everett and Marcus Morton, of Massachusetts, as well as those of his father. They are indeed valuable mementoes.

While living in Blandford Mr. Lewis was tendered political preferment by being elected two terms and serving on the board of assessors. He removed to Bridgeport, Conn. in 1851 and engaged in remunerative business pursuits. He began to take quite an active part in politics in Bridgeport about the year 1852. Mr. Lewis was and is still, a Jacksonian democrat of the old school and his interest was of course centered in the above party. These were the days of Whigs and Democrats. He was elected to the common council serving under Mayor P. C. Calhoun for two terms.

In 1860 he was appointed Deputy Sheriff for Fairfield county and also in the same year was made U. S. Deputy Marshall. He served as deputy sheriff with great satisfaction, continuously until 1875 when he was given the democratic nomination of high sheriff of this county, and was elected by a very large majority for those days, receiving 2,700 more votes than his opponent. He carried every town in the county but one and so great was his popularity that Governor Lounsbury, of Ridgefield, the lacking town, facetiously told him that he would see that the town went democratic for his re-appointment.

Mr. Lewis served in this office for three years and became better known perhaps than any other official in a similar position in the state. Since 1878 Mr. Lewis has not given personal attention to politics but confined himself very successfully to the insurance and real estate business in this city, in which he is still actively engaged, bearing his advanced years, both physically and mentally, wonderfully well. Surely his career has been one to look back upon with pardonable pride and pleasure.

GENEALOGICAL RECORDS.

Explanations, Abbreviations, etc.

For convenience the records of the various Lewis families are divided into Books and each Book into chapters. At the head of each Book appears the name of the earliest known ancestor of that family. The List of Books is a complete index to the Books as published to this time. New Books will be added from time to time as new branches of the Lewis family are found. As soon as Books are proved parts of others they will be merged into the Books to which they belong. Each name is numbered when first printed and whenever the name is repeated this number follows in brackets. The abbreviations commonly used in genealogical work are used; as b. for born; d. died; m. married; m. (1) first wife; dau. daughter; unm. not married; v. p. see page; etc. Instead of repeating the name of a place in the same paragraph initials only are frequently given.

GEORGE LEWIS, Barnstable, Mass.

CHAPTER LXIX.

BY REV. J. J. LEWIS, BOSTON, MASS.

George Lewis and Sarah (Jenkins) Lewis came from Greenwich, England, to Plymouth Mass., about 1630; moved to Scituate in 1633 or 1634; thence to Barnstable in 1637. George Lewis died there, and was buried, with others of the first settlers, near the seashore; grave unknown.

Lieut. James Lewis, born in England, married Sarah Lane, the first white child born in Scituate, October 31, 1655. Lived in Barnstable, and had a family of ten children.

In the genealogical notes of the Barnstable families, pp. 15 et ff., the following may be found: "No man in Barnstable brought up his family better than Lieut. Lewis. All of his ten children were well educated for the times; and all became useful and respectable men and women. The secret of his success is soon told: he never neglected his business. Every year he added a new field to his estate; and though one of the most generous of fathers, he ranked amongst the wealthy in 1703. Born in 1631, he was 72 years old when he died. His son, Lieut. Eben Lewis was equally wealthy. James Lewis, when a lad, was bound an apprentice to a black smith; and in after life, when he became a distinguished man, he thought it not derogatory to his character to blow the bellows or swing a hammer. He was industrious and frugal. When he could not earn a shilling, he was content to earn a penny, which he put to good use."

The headstones which mark his grave and that of his wife are still to be seen in the old cemetery in Barnstable.

CHAPTER LXXI.

By M. LEON LEWIS, MALDEN, MASS.

Morgan Gillette Lewis, M. D. (LXVI-16) was born at Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 15, 1813. In his early days he gave evidence of being very intellectual and was always filled with a desire for knowledge. The war of 1812, with its Indian ravages, had left his parents in poverty and he was obliged to work his own way with but little help. By perseverance, he fitted himself for college and studied medicine. When he was 18 years old his father died and left the cares of the family upon him and his younger brother George, but notwithstanding all these cares, he passed through the Philadelphia Medical College and graduated with honors. He also studied at Medical Institutions in Ohio and in the spring of 1836 he commenced the practice of medicine at Black Rock, N. Y. At the same time he assumed the editorship of the Black Rock Advocate, a paper then published under the auspices of General Porter and designed to advance the interests of that place against the village of Buffalo.

When the rapid growth of Buffalo proved that the contest was a vain one, Gen. Porter removed to Niagara Falls and for some time after that Dr. Lewis edited both the Advocate and the Niagara Falls Journal, still attending to his practice of medicine. Finally he left the editor's chair and devoted himself entirely to his profession and so continued until his death.

He was always interested in public matters and was a warm advocate of any plan which would advance the interests of the community in which he lived.

He was a sensible, practical and successful practitioner and was in the advance in all the enterprises associated with his profession.

He never placed money before his duty to his profession and on several occasions refused public offices which he thought to be inconsistent with the dignity of a physician. When any person cherishes this high sense of honor in his intercourse among his fellows, one may look to him as a man of generous and charitable impulses.

Dr. Lewis was married in 1855 to Lydia Cassett and a little child, the only fruit of this union died about two weeks previous, leaving Mrs. Lewis doubly bereaved. As the hour of death approached, Dr. Lewis recognized its coming and with the courage of a true and consistent Christian, gave verbal directions for the arrangement of his funeral and the disposition of his affairs.

CHAPTER LVII.

By H. J. LEWIS, JR., LOUISVILLE, KY.

December 4.—This morning we intended to hunt again, but soon after day we heard three distinct guns under the Alleghany mountains, therefore we were particularly cautious not to venture too far to hunt, lest we should be outwitted by our ever cautious enemy.

December 5.—This morning we marched to Fort Cumberland, and met, about five miles from Crisscops, a relief commanded by Lieutenant Lynn, of twelve men. We accepted of this relief and gave up our command to Mr. Lynn, according to order.

December 6.—Five deserters were this day punished, each receiving one thousand lashes. In this last command I may with the greatest truth aver that I saw the most horrid, shocking sight I ever yet beheld. At a house adjoining the cornfield in which our soldiers were ever employed in gathering corn, we saw the bodies of three different people, who were first massacred, then scalped, and afterward thrown into a fire. These bodies were not yet quite consumed, but the flesh on many parts of them. We saw the clothes of these people yet bloody, and the stakes, the instruments of their death, still bloody and their brains sticking to them. The orchards all down, the mills destroyed and a waste of all manner of household goods. These people in my opinion were very industrious, having the best corn I ever saw, and their plantation well calculated for produce, and every other conveniency suitable to the station of a farmer.

CHAPTER XXI.

BY GEO. HARLAN LEWIS, NEW YORK CITY.

Dea. Aaron (124) and his wife, Sarah, were admitted to the church at Lyndeboro, Aug. 28, 1773. On the records of this church under date of Oct. 30, 1806, we read: "Voted that as there is not found any record of the vote of the church where as they made choice of brothers Samuel Houston and Aaron Lewis as Deacons that the present Clerk record the same." Dea. Aaron was clerk from 1806 to 1812 and Deacon from the election referred to above until 1830 when he moved to New Boston spending his last days with his son, Amasa.

Looked up to by all of his day, Deacon Aaron Lewis was highly esteemed for his upright Christian character and integrity. He was selectman in 1793 and 1794 and served as Town Clerk in 1809 and 1810. He served his country among the N. H. troops as the following items from the records of the Revolution show:

"One of 33 who in 1776 went to Ticonderoga with Captain William Barron, under Colonel Wyman.

In July 1777 with 19 others he went to Ticonderoga with Lient. Samuel Houston. Sergeant, Dec. 8, 1777.

Among those who went on the expedition to R. I., Aug. 17, 1778, under Capt. Lee, Colonel Moses Kelley's Regiment.

"One of those few who rendered the most service during the great struggle."

In the cemetery at North Lyndeboro, near where they lived rests all that is mortal of Aaron Lewis and his wife. Not a descendant of the Lewis name remains in town. The old homestead is on a side-hill at the foot of Pinnacle mountain to the north of which is their old estate being in Lyndeboro on the boundary line of Francistown.

The house is a substantial one and a half story white building. The land is fertile but heavy to work. The springs from the mountain supply the hills with moisture and they are cultivated to the top of the ridge, where they slope gradually to the beautiful meadows of Francistown.

The scenery is beautiful, the air clear and bracing and the nights cool after the hottest days in summer.

Moses was a very pious man and always had family worship up to the time of his last sickness.

On May 24, 1774, Moses Lewis sells the farm that he and his brother Aaron settled on in 1771, to Enoch Holmes, of Walpole, Mass., for £133-6-s. 8d. On June 1, 1774, John Stiles, of Lyndeboro, for £45," paid by Moses Lewis, Yeoman," sells him "part of the lot the Proprietors of Lyndeboro laid out to Rev. Sewall Goodridge," the 2d, minister at Lyndeboro, in the northwest part of the town. In 1791, Dec. 28th Greenfield was incorporated by taking the northwest part of Lyndeboro, the southwest part of Frankestown and a part of what was called "Society Lands" now Bennington. In the articles the boundary line was "along the land of Moses Lewis."

In 1795, a road was laid out in Greenfield "through the land of Moses Lewis to a little brook in said land of Moses Lewis—thence easterly to the road that leads to Lyndeboro." (Town records.) Upon this farm three generations have been raised.

CHAPTER XLII.

From Richmond, Va., Times.

JOHN FRANCIS LEWIS.

Ex-United States Senator John F. Lewis died at "Linwood," his residence in Rockingham-co. near Port Republic, Sept. 2, '95. He had been a long and patient sufferer from cancer of the face, and his death had been expected for some time.

John F. Lewis was born near Port Republic, March 1, 1818, the second son of Gen. Samuel H. Lewis. Thomas the eldest son of John Lewis who first settled Augusta-co., Va., was John F. Lewis' great-grandfather in the paternal line. His great-grandfather on his mother's side was Col. Charles Lewis, the youngest son of the pioneer John.

The subject of this sketch, though the son of a highly educated Virginia gentleman, did not himself possess a collegiate education, as he showed at an early age a decided preference for practical affairs and took upon himself the management of his father's plantation, (his father being then in the Legislature) when he was about fifteen years old.

In politics he was a decided Whig, but besides attending Whig conventions, he took no active part in politics until about the year 1859, when he wrote a few communications over a nom de plume to the Rockingham Register, arguing both against the right and the policy of secession. These articles attracted the attention of the people of the county, and the next year, when they were called upon to choose members of a convention, he became a candidate and stumped the county from one end to the other, declaring in every speech that he was unalterably opposed to secession; that he considered his allegiance due to the Federal Government, and that if they wanted a man who, under any circumstances, would vote for an ordinance of secession, that they ought not to vote for him. The result was his election by an overwhelming majority.

In that convention, which was afterwards known as the Secession Convention, he worked and voted against secession, and was the only member east of the Alleghany mountains who never consented to sign the ordinance. Mr. Lincoln tendered him the place of Marshall of the Western District of Virginia, but the war coming on, he could not accept. He remained loyal to the Union throughout the Civil war, but at its close was warmly in favor of amnesty to all who had taken part for the Southern Confederacy. In 1865 he was a candidate for Congress against the Hon. A. H. H. Stuart but was defeated by him.

In 1869, when the people of the State had to vote on the new constitution, he, together with a number of influential Republicans, opposed the test oath and the disfranchisement clauses. This movement resulted in the nomination against the regular Republican ticket, headed by Gen. H. H. Wells, of what was known as the "true Republican ticket," headed by Gilbert C. Walker. Upon this last named ticket, which was elected by a large majority, Mr. Lewis was the candidate for Lieutenant Governor. It was the duty of the Legislature, which was elected at the time, to choose two United States Senators to represent the State, which had had no representatives in the United States Senate since 1861. Mr. Lewis and Judge Johnston, of Abingdon, were chosen, and in 1870 they were admitted to their seats in the Senate.

Senator Lewis, having been a life-long Union man, and a Republican since the close of the Civil war, acted, of course, with the Republican party, while his colleague acted with the Democrats. He served in the Senate until 1875.

In 1872, at the National Republican Convention, held in Philadelphia, the Virginia delegates cast the vote of the State for John F. Lewis for the position of Vice-President. This was merely a complimentary vote, as Senator Lewis was in no sense a candidate for the position. In 1878 he was appointed United States Marshal, which position he resigned in 1881, after he was elected Lieutenant Governor on the ticket with Gov. Wm. E. Cameron. He served as Lieutenant Governor until 1885, when he retired to private life.

In 1889 he antagonized Gen. Mahone's candidacy for the Governorship, and his influence had much to do with the General's overwhelming defeat.

Mrs. John F. Lewis, who survives her husband, is the youngest daughter, Serena, of the distinguished lawyer, Dan. Sheffey, who, as a Federalist, represented the Southwestern District of Virginia from 1805 to 1813.

For the past twenty-six years he has been foreman of the tool department at the Middletown Plate Company. Oct. 12, 1858, he married Mary Gilbert Smith, of Middletown. She and four children survive. They are Chas. H., Mrs. E. L. Clark and Mrs. Minnie Markham of Middletown, and E. S. Lewis of Essex. After serving four terms as councilman and two as alderman, he was elected mayor of Middletown in 1888. He has also been first selectman, and for years a member of the board of education. President of Middletown Building and Loan Association, district deputy of Central Lodge, I. O. O. F., director in various enterprises of his city, he was a man who was universally liked, and none spoke of him but to praise.

EXPLANATION:—The Roman numerals at the left denote the generations. Stars are placed after the names of the youngest member of each family. All on the same line are of the same generation, and hence are cousins with the exception of names between the stars which are brothers and sisters. If you preserve your copies, and of course you do, send for an extra copy, cut this page into strips on the division lines and paste the strips together. Then you will have a complete diagram of your family so far as it has been published. All additions and corrections you can furnish will be very thankfully received.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The Lewis & Fowler Girder Rail Company, of Brooklyn, has decided to consolidate with the Lewis & Fowler Manufacturing Company. The capital of the latter company is $300,000, and that of the girder rail company $200,000.

In Freetown, Sierra Leone, there lives a very ordinary looking little black man, who has the regular negro features and hair. In stature he is less than five feet in height. Like the immortal Richard III, he shrugs his shoulders when he walks, but unlike him, he does not sing out, "Shine on, bright sun," etc. He is Sir Samuel Lewis, and was knighted by Queen Victoria about four or five years ago. He is one of the ablest lawyers in Sierra Leone and represents the interest of some of the wealthiest firms in England. Sir Samuel was recently offered by a firm in London £9000 per annum to locate in that city and attend to its legal business, but he declined the offer, preferring to remain among his people in Sierra Leone, with whom he is a great favorite.

Mr. R. W. Lewis, of Lewis & Parker, the Naugatuck, Ct., correspondent of the Waterbury American for 13 years, has retired from its service. Following is the nice little puff the American gave him: "R. W. Lewis will be missed here in the office almost as much as by the readers of the paper in Naugatuck. He has been a loyal and industrious worker, a conscientious newsgatherer, thoroughly interested in all the concerns of Naugatuck and in the publication of everything that would increase the reputation of the town and promote its interests. We and our readers will be fortunate to obtain in the future the same competent reporting that he has given in the past."

William Caldwell, of Syracuse, N. Y., has erected in the cemetery at Manlius, N. Y., a handsome fountain, described by the makers as Acanthus leaf, scroll base, three pans, with boy and duck, in memory of his wife Elizabeth Lewis. This handsome ornament of a beautiful cemetery must be seen to be fully appreciated.

In "Moods," Philadelphia's new modern Quarterly, which has for its motto,

"A Book wherein the Author and the Artist Pleaseth Himself," Mr. Lewis carries this creed to its legitimate end. Artistic in contents and typographical excellence, the beneficent influences of such catholicity of treatment is apparent. Little wonder is it that the editor of "Moods" has gathered about him in the staid old Quaker City a large and influential group from its higher Bohemian circles. The second volume, just issued, has aroused a deal of criticism, favorable and otherwise, but that there should be a difference of opinion is but natural, when one considers the play of marked individualities for which "Moods" is the arena. The editors are E. St. Elmo Lewis, managing director of the technical department of the Jenson Press, and Walter Blackburn Harte. Published by the Jenson Press, Philadelphia.

"The Divorce Mill" is a small volume containing realistic sketches of the South Dakota "divorce colony." The authors are Harry Hazel and S. L. Lewis, who visited Sioux Falls for their material, and in the form of stories have enlightened the public as to the very peculiar social conditions that are found there.
